12 Hanafis convicted in Washington siege

WASHINGTON (AP) — A jury convicted 12 Hanafi Moslems on Saturday for their roles in capturing three Washington buildings and 149 hostages last March, a siege that prosecutors called a three-day reign of terror that brought the nation's capital to its knees.

Three of the defendants and their leader, Hamaas Abdul Khaalis, were found guilty of second-degree murder in the shooting death of a young radio newsman at one of the sites. However, all 12 were exonerated of felony murder in the death.

The defendants, who range from 20 to 54 years of age, sat quietly as District of Columbia Superior Court Judge Nicholas S. Nunzio read the verdicts from a checklist detailing the 373 counts against them. Several moved their lips in apparent silent prayer, as they had throughout the trial.

The 12 men were found guilty on 139 counts. Each faces a possible sentence of eight or more life terms in prison; Khaalis could draw up to 27 life terms plus 15 years. Nunzio set sentencing for Sept. 6.

During the 38-hour siege, the men said they were protesting release of the movie "Mohammed, Messenger of God," which they described as blasphemous. They said they also were seeking to avenge the 1973 murders of seven members of Khaalis' household, six of them his children, by members of the rival Black Muslim sect.

Five Black Muslims are serving prison sentences for the murders, but Khaalis and his followers demanded that the five be handed over to them for punishment.

Khaalis is the leader of a Washington-based group of Hanafi Moslems, an orthodox, worldwide branch of the Islamic faith.

Khaalis' lawyer, Harry T. Alexander, said his client accepted the verdict calmly.

The Hanafi leader "feels that this may be all over, and when it is all over, Allah will have spoken," said Alexander.

As U.S. marshals led the defendants away, Khaalis saluted his wife, who was among five veiled Hanafi women in the courtroom audience.

Nunzio then thanked the jurors, many of whom were weeping, for their job on what he called "the most awesome responsibility" they can have as citizens.

"Many of you are crying," he said. "But if you weren't, it would bother me. You have done one hell of a job."

The all-black jury of 10 women and two men had deliberated for 2½ days before reaching a verdict at the end of an eight-week trial. All of the defendants also are black.

Parolee jailed in mass slayings

'Would rip him apart,' says mournful family

PROSPECT, Conn. (AP) — A 27-year-old prison parolee was arrested Saturday on charges of having committed the state's worst mass murder by killing his foster brother's entire family.

Lorne J. Acquin, a Canadian Indian whose foster mother said he was born out of wedlock, was charged with nine counts of murder and held in lieu of $250,000 bail pending his arraignment on Monday.

"We would just do anything if we saw him," his foster mother, Marion Beaudoin, cried during an interview at her home in this rural community north of New Haven. "We would probably rip him apart."

At the same time, she and her children said they were overwhelmed with disbelief that the mustachioed high school dropout had it in him to kill the family. They were at a loss for an explanation.

"We can't believe he did it because he was not a violent person and he loved those children," Pauline Pelton, a daughter declared. "He wouldn't do that."

She said Acquin, taken into the Beaudoin home at the age of 8 or 9, was a reflective sort and lately had been living in a Waterbury apartment and working at odd jobs.

"He was like a shell into himself. He liked to be by himself," Mrs. Pelton said near tears. "He just liked to think, and you don't know what was on his mind. I'd love to know."

They spoke as Frederick Beaudoin, 33, officially identified the bodies of his family.

Some of them bound and beaten, the victims were discovered in a fire that destroyed their little bungalow before dawn on Friday. Dead were Cheryl Beaudoin, 29; the couples' seven children aged 4 to 11, and a visiting cousin, Jennifer Santoro, 6.

The official cause of death was not disclosed by Chief Medical Examiner Elliot Gross, and funeral arrangements were incomplete.

Acquin was booked just 24 hours after the fire alarm was sounded at the house in which he was a frequent guest and baby sittter.

He and his brother Patrick began living with Marion and Paul Beaudoin and their six children, including Frederick, about 20 years ago, the foster mother said.

"We loved him," Mrs. Beaudoin continued. "He was part of our family."

She said he turned to crime after their own home was devastated by a fire 14 years ago, perhaps because of fears that the financially pressed family would turn him out.

Then began a string of arrests and jail sentences for robbing the homes of neighbors, she said. Mrs. Beaudoin added that he had been released only last spring on his latest conviction.

Chief State Medical Examiner Dr. Elliot Gross said Saturday that autopsies on the bodies of two of the Beaudoin children, Holly Lyn, 5, and Mary Lou, 4, indicated they died of a combination of head injuries caused by "blunt force" and smoke inhalation.

He refused to say whether that meant neither the head injuries alone nor the smoke alone would have killed the children.

An autopsy on the body of Paul Albert, 8, showed he died of head injuries caused by blunt force, Dr. Gross said.

He said he hoped to complete all the autopsies by Sunday. The bodies would then be released and funeral arrangements made.

Acquin was a frequent visitor to the Beaudoin home, most recently a month ago.

Massive air strike by Egypt?

By The Associated Press

Libya claimed Egyptian planes staged a massive air strike against targets stretching from the Mediterranean to deep in the Libyan desert Saturday and that eight Egyptian planes were shot down. Egypt denied any raids took place.

A spokesman for the Libyan government of Col. Moammar Khadafy warned "if this unjustifiable aggression is not stopped, (Libyan) forces will retaliate strongly in the depth of Egypt," the Tripoli-based Arab Revolutionary News Agency said.

Three previous border clashes were reported last week in a growing dispute between the two North African Arab nations.

The Libyan news agency quoted a government spokesman as saying the Egyptian attacks began in the morning and were continuing into the evening.

In Cairo, an Egyptian government spokesman said the Libyans had dreamed up "imaginary raids." He accused Libya of spreading "lies" about recent border clashes and said Egyptian forces were not engaged in any new fighting against Libya as of midafternoon Saturday.

The Libyan news agency said the Egyptian air force attacked an area south of Kasr Al-Jadi in northeast Libya and "the air defense of the Libyan army countered the attack and shot down three (Soviet-made) MIG21s."

Libya said five Egyptian planes were downed in three earlier actions in what seemed to be a vast air strike against Libyan positions from the Mediterranean to the Al Kufra oases 500 miles to the south.

MURDER SUSPECT IN CUSTODY

Connecticut State Police troppers escort Lorne Acquin to a car outside police barracks in Bethany following his arrest Saturday in the deaths of eight children and a woman.

Corpse walks in on undertaker

MIDLAND, Mich. (AP) — "In 31 years in the business I've never had the corpse walk in on me," said funeral director Gerald Miner.

He was halfway through making funeral arrangements for Steven Farison, 20, when Farison walked in and told his mother, "This is a hell of a place for a family reunion."

"It's quite a shock," said Farison's mother, Jeanniene Haapala of Flint. "I was so weak I couldn't even stand up. I just pitched forward on the desk and cried."

Farison was believed to be one of three persons killed in a fiery auto accident near Midland early Saturday.

Nightclub gunman kills 6; ex-bouncer held

KLAMATH FALLS, Ore. (AP) — A man bearing a semi-automatic rifle opened fire at customers leaving a night club here early Saturday, killing six persons, including a woman eight months pregnant.

Arrested within minutes of the shootings was Dewitt C. Henry, 26, who witnesses said used to work as a bouncer at Uncle Albert's Lounge and had argued with the manager there shortly before the violence erupted.

A sheriff's deputy said the decision had been made to charge Henry with murder, but no decision had been made as to how many counts he would be charged with. The pregnant woman's baby could not be saved.

The suspect's mother, Audrey Henry of Klamath Falls, hired a lawyer for her son and stood outside the jail early Saturday afternoon waiting to visit him. Asked about his situation, she said, "Well, I don't know my son very well, but he has had a couple of problems of late."

She said he is estranged from his wife and tried to commit suicide three weeks ago.

An arraignment for Henry was scheduled for Monday in Klamath County District Court.

Police investigator Duane Simon said he was told that Henry had said to a barmaid at Poor Ol' Dan's, another nightspot, that he would seek revenge at Uncle Alberts for having been told to leave the place earlier.

Henry was wounded slightly by a state police shotgun blast following a chase during which the windshields of two police cars were shot out, officers said.

"He'd have gotten me if I hadn't been hanging out the window," said one trooper who asked not to be identified.

Witnesses said the shooting erupted at 2 a.m. shortly after Henry got into an argument with a manager at Uncle Albert's, a lounge and steakhouse just south of the city.

Lyle Smith of Reno, Nev., said he was passing through this town about 25 miles north of the California state line and saw a man in a pickup truck start firing.

"There were six people laying on the ground after it was over. It was somebody just setting in a pickup truck waiting for anybody en masse he could find to pull the trigger on."

The weapon was identified as a .223-caliber semi-automatic civilian version of the M-16 military rifle.

The dead were Carol Ann Seater, 23, of Klamath Falls and her husband, Robert, 26; Andrew L. Walker, 23, Medford; Gary L. Anderson, 27, Klamath Falls; James L. Trueman, 25, Kodiak, Alaska; and Michael G. Mortenson, 23, Klamath Falls.

Robert Seater and Mortenson had lingered in critical condition in Presbyterian Community Hospital until Saturday night.

Trooper Michael Spencer said he spotted the pickup truck several blocks from the lounge and began chasing it. The gunman fired several times, shattering the windshield and two side window, then backed into the patrol car, knocking out the headlights, Spencer said.

Another trooper, Ken Cooper, arrived and slammed his patrol car into the pickup truck, bringing it to a halt.

He said he fired six shots into the truck from his pistol and three shotgun blasts, one of which hit the driver.

Police said they confiscated the rifle and a pistol and shotgun they also found in the truck.

Carter goals praised by India official

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The foreign minister of India, the largest nation of the Third World, said Saturday that President Carter has set foreign policy goals worthy of support by "all powers, great or small" — including the nonaligned camp.

A. B. Vajpayee made the statement in a toast to visiting U.S. Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher. The statement later was issued as an official government press release.

In a significant departure from past Indian criticism of U.S. policy, Vajpayee said he recommends some of Carter's goals to India's friends in the Third World.

Christopher told reporters later, "We are on the verge of a new era of close and friendly relations between the United States and India."

In the toast, Vajpayee said India noted with approval "the stirring words of President Carter" in his foreign policy speech at Notre Dame University in South Bend, Ind., on May 22, "when he spoke about bridging the great divide between the rich and the poor."

Vajpayee, whose official title is minister of external affairs, added that India is ready to contribute to U.S. initiatives to restrain foreign arms sales, halt nuclear weapons proliferation and end military rivalry in the Indian Ocean.

6,000-year-old human brain found

WASHINGTON (AP) — Archeologists have found a 6,000-year-old human brain near Sarasota, Fla. that may contain the oldest preserved brain matter yet discovered, the National Geographic Society said Saturday.

The society, which is cosponsoring the Florida project, announced here that a Sarasota pathologist has confirmed the findings.

The dig also has produced an extinct tortoise skewered by a stake, and a 10,000-year-old boomerang, possibly the oldest ever found.

These and hundreds of other objects have been discovered in and near Little Salt Spring, a 250-foot deep, spring-fed sinkhole.

The society, which publishes National Geographic Magazine, said preliminary tests indicate that up to 2,000 people who lived some 7,000 years ago may lie buried in the area.

"To find this many people at the site would be amazing, since man 6,000 or 7,000 years ago was generally considered a nomadic hunter who moved in extended family groups from place to place," said Carl J. Clausen, an underwater archeologist who is directing work at the site.

"The large number of burials suggests a tradition of using the area for interment that may have lasted 1,000 years or more."

The three-foot-long stake found in the tortoise indicated it probably was shaped and pointed by a prehistoric hunter, making it one of the earliest wooden weapons found in the New World.

The carbon indicated that portions of the spear and tortoise shell shows they're 12,000-to-13,000 years old, the society said.

Angry board split over Pomona school budget

By DAN NIEBRUGGE
PB Staff Writer

With 18 days remaining before the state mandated deadline for school budget adoptions, an angry split has arisen between Pomona school board President Don Donnelly and the man who nominated him for the job, trustee Eugene Whitlock.

In an angry blast at Donnelly Saturday, Whitlock accused the board president of "playing politics" with the school budget and the education of Pomona children.

Confrontations between the two trustees began at last Tuesday's board meeting when Donnelly ruled Whitlock out of order on a funding proposal Whitlock had introduced to upgrade Westmont Elementary School. Whitlock claimed the item was on the agenda. Donnelly said it was not, but amended his objection on Saturday saying the item had not been given the opportunity for administrative consideration.

That same Tuesday meeting ended on an angry note when Donnelly ordered pulled from the agenda several funding proposals made by Whitlock.

Whitlock Saturday also accused Donnelly of refusing to call a board meeting for Monday evening because he (Donnelly) will not be able to attend. Whitlock accused the board president of delaying budget talks at a crucial time because Donnelly is "on an ego trip."

Donnelly said Saturday, "It is perfectly all right with me for the board to have a meeting Monday if a quorum can be found. I would like to see an agenda for such a meeting so that I might have the superintendent communicate my feelings about the items scheduled."

Whitlock said, "The price of equipment is going up each day, inflation is increasing and building costs are rising 10 to 20 per cent each year, but it seems Donnelly is requiring that all matters pass his own set of standards and meetings be held at his convenience."

Whitlock harkened back to last Tuesday's confrontation saying, "Our packets were delivered the Friday before the meeting. I was shocked to get blind-sided by a political play on Tuesday night. If President Donnelly has a question or is concerned with an agenda item he usually calls me at home over the weekend.."

"I know he is upset that I am holding out to get a qualified business manager, but this is really a surprise. I feel the students should come before hidden agendas. It does not make any difference who sponsors an item as long as we get the needed items to educate the students."

Whitlock said that all the items under consideration which Donnelly pulled had been discussed with the administration. These included — in addition to the Westmont proposal — items aimed at hiring a new architect for several construction projects around the district, the purchase of four new buses, setting aside funds for a computer center and hiring a research analyst to work on the district's impending bond election.

Whitlock said, "Every item was properly placed on the agenda, but Donnelly never even asked the administration if it were aware of the items."

For his part, Donnelly continued to insist Saturday that Whitlock's proposals had not gone through the proper channels to be put on the agenda.

"That's the crux of the matter," said Donnelly. "We hold the superintendent accountable for the operation of the district. I think we should at least do him the courtesy of giving him an opportunity to study proposals. Those items came in only a day before the agenda was put together."

Donnelly said he had not called Whitlock about the items, but noted, "He (Whitlock) could have called me."

Whitlock maintained that his proposals were completely proper and pointed to the fact that he was responsible for working out the taxing plans to build the Marshall Junior High School cafeteria and remodel the Hamilton School cafeteria. Whitlock said he had discussed the items with the superintendent over a week ago.

Donnelly charged Whitlock with not having returned calls made by Donnelly in an attempt to discuss the problems and work things out.

Finch denied license to practice in Kansas

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — A surgeon who served 12½ years in a California prison for murdering his wife was denied a license Saturday to practice medicine in Kansas.

The Kansas Board of Healing Arts voted unanimously to refuse a state license to Dr. Bernard Finch, a surgeon now practicing in Bolivar, Mo.

The board based its refusal on a provision in state law permitting it to deny a medical license to anyone whose license has been revoked by another state. California took away Finch's license following his conviction in 1959 of killing his wife, Barbara Finch in West Covina.

By choosing that provision, the board sidestepped making an independent judgment on the surgeon's moral character, the only other reason it could have chosen for refusing the license.

Finch, now 59, has remarried and has practiced medicine in the southwestern Missouri community of Bolivar for about two years.

His application to practice in Missouri was turned down at first because of his conviction, but the Missouri Supreme Court upheld an appeals court ruling in his favor, and the license was granted him in 1974.

In an appearance last month before the Kansas board, Finch said he had been rehabilitated through extensive private and group therapy and was thinking of relocating his practice to Kansas.

Frank Johnson, board attorney, said Finch has not threatened the board with legal action similar to that in Missouri, but added that any court tests would likely focus on the doctor's rehabilitation.

La Verne firemen think children playing with matches started a grass fire which blackened four acres Saturday afternoon on the Pomona-La Verne border at Fulton Road, south of Bonita Avenue.

Energy czar—too much power, or not enough?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Within a few weeks, James R. Schlesinger Jr. is expected to become the nation's first secretary of energy, heading a staff of 20,000 persons and controlling a budget of about $10 billion.

But the argument is not yet settled over whether he is to become a powerful energy czar charged with carrying out President Carter's energy policy or a weaker figure without sufficient authority to make the best use of the nation's dwindling reserves of natural gas, oil and other resources.

Before Carter puts his signature to the bill creating the first new Cabinet-level agency since 1966, the House and Senate are expected to give final approval to the work of a congressional conference committee which hammered out a compromise bill Friday.

The new department, which probably will hang out its shingle in August, will include what used to be the Federal Power Commission, the Energy Research and Development Administration, the Federal Energy Administration and bits and pieces of the federal energy bureaucracy from all over Washington.

One key decision by the committee held that the new department should not have the power to set natural gas prices, as Carter had requested. Instead, the panel assigned that function to a new five-member independent Energy Regulatory Commission.

Even as the House and Senate conferees were putting their final touches on the big reorganization measure, fears were being expressed by some lawmakers that the enigmatic pipe-smoking Schlesinger would not have enough power to carry out Carter's energy policy once that policy gets through Congress.

But there were as many critics who said no one Cabinet member should have as much authority as Schlesinger will be handed.

Sen. John H. Glenn Jr., D-Ohio, a member of the Senate committee which voted to create the new agency, says it is missing several vital ingredients necessary for a comprehensive energy policy.

For example, says Glenn, the energy secretary was not given the authority to set gasoline economy standards for new cars. Nor will he have direct authority over pollution standards for either gasoline emissions or coal-burning electric utilities.

Much of the authority for offshore oil leasing remains in the Interior Department.

Driver injured, jailed in crash

A 33-year-old man was in serious condition with head injuries after his car collided with a pickup truck Saturday on the Corona Expressway at Riverside Drive near Chino.

Enrique Alamarez was also arrested for drunk driving by the highway patrol after his southbound car turned left in front of the truck which was northbound on the expressway, at 5:30 p.m.

John Abel, 25, of Chino, driver of the truck, was not injured, according to highway patrolman Jim O'Brien. His wife, Patricia, 24, suffered minor injuries and did not require medical attention

Alamarez underwent surgery Saturday evening at Chino General Hospital.

Boy, 14, arrested on morals charge

A 14-year-old Ontario youth is in Juvenile Hall in San Berardino today after being arrested Friday evening on a charge of child molestation in Ontario.

Ontario police said the boy was seen by the mother of a 4-year-old boy reaching through a fence and grabbing the child. Witnesses told police they saw the youth grab the boy and begin molesting him.

Concurrently, the boy's father saw what was occurring and ran outside to grab the attacker. He held him until police arrived.

Cost abuses by utilities cited in study

WASHINGTON (AP) — The average householder has paid $380 over the past three years in fuel "adjustment" costs automatically passed on by utility companies, a congressional study says.

The study, released Saturday, also showed that utilities are frequently allowed to include other costs such as transportation in the automatic fuel adjustments they tack onto monthly bills.

"The inclusion of such costs in fuel adjustments charges not only means that such charges are passed along automatically, but also that consumers in many states do not know what they are paying for," said Sens. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, and Lee Metcalf, D-Mont.

"Abuse of fuel adjustment clauses suggests that the public might be better served by their abolition."

The study was prepared by the Library of Congress for Senate governmental affairs subcommittees headed by Muskie and Metcalf.

It is the third year such a study has been made.

"Since 1974, utility bills have automatically gone up more than $27 billion, without any careful review by state utility commissions," Muskie and Metcalf said.

An aide said the $380 figure was arrived at by dividing this total by 71 million households.

Last year alone, automatic fuel adjustment clauses accounted for $9.6 billion of the total increase of more than $12 billion in utility bills.

The Library of Congress researchers said 18 state regulatory commissions allow transportation costs to be included in fuel adjustment charges. It said 22 permit the companies to include expenses for normal power losses during transmission.

"It appears that fuel adjustment clauses are being used by utilities, with commission sanction, to throw a blanket over more and more of the utility costs which should be openly reviewed and subjected to challenge," the two senators said.

Supporters of fuel adjustment charges say the utility firms need them to avoid costly delays in recovering increases in the prices they must pay for their fuel. Critics say hearings should be held before increases in utility bills are allowed.

The study also indicated that state utility commissions are becoming more resistant to rate increases. It showed that in 1976, the commissions granted $2.7 billion in increases out of a total of $5.6 billion requested. In 1975 they granted $2.5 billion out of $3.7 billion.

Newton free on bail, but still bitter

OAKLAND (AP) — Black Panther Huey Newton, who fled to Cuba three years ago but returned voluntarily earlier this month to face murder and assault charges, was freed on $80,000 bail Saturday.

"It feels good," said Newton, 35, as he hugged his wife, Gwen, and waved to 50 cheering supporters.

Several hours later, Newton told a news conference that he was still bitter about a judge's refusal last week to release him on his own recognizance.

"This $80,000 could have aided our school programs, our sickle cell anemia and hypertension programs, or been spread among some 48 other service programs," he said.

"Although I originally refused to accept this money for bail, my party and attorneys insisted I come out to be able to continue my work during these trials," he added.

"I am home now for good, no matter what happens."

$11 million in aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House announced Saturday that the federal government is making $11.35 million available to New York to help it recover from last week's blackout.

The aid program, involving five federal departments, will fund demolition of burned-out buildings, additional jobs for young people, loans for commercial redevelopment and attempts to "relieve congestion in the criminal justice system."

More than 3,700 suspects were arrested in connection with looting or arson during the 25-hour blackout July 14-15.

The coordinated program was announced by the White House at the same time New York Mayor Abraham D. Beame and Labor Secretary Ray Marshall were announcing it in New York.

The aid will come from the Commerce and Labor departments, the Department of Housing and Urban Development and the Law Enforcement Assistance Administration, a branch of the Justice Department.

The Small Business Administration, which provided its first blackout-related loan on Friday, is expected to offer 4,000 such loans totaling up to $100 million.

The White House said the aid program was designed to help spur recovery by businesses, create new jobs and stimulate community projects.

Included in the program are:

—$2.1 million for demolition of burned-out and hazardous buildings.

—$2 million for jobs, to be targeted to young adults to assist in the cleanup.

—Up to $5 million in rehabilitation loans for commercial redevelopment.

—$1 million, and technical assistance, to ease the overload in the criminal justice system resulting from the thousands of arrests for looting during the blackout.

—$250,000 to assist poor people to develop communitybased economic development.

The White House said the program was prepared by an interagency group.

Tony Orlando threatened with suit

BOSTON (AP) — The owner of a Rhode Island summer theater said Saturday he will sue singer Tony Orlando if he doesn't show up next week for a week of performances that already have attracted a $200,000 advance.

"If he doesn't show up, all I can say is Flip Wilson didn't show up, and he is being sued," Buster Bonoff told The Associated Press by telephone from his Warwick musical theater.

Orlando, 33-year-old New York City star of the trio Tony Orlando and Dawn, told his audience Friday night during a performance at the South Shore Music Circus in nearby Cohasset he planned to quit after two performances Saturday.

Members of the audience said he told them he would leave show business in the name of Jesus Christ. Orlando refused to comment.

Youth in car shot by occupants of 2nd auto

A 16-year-old Pomona youth was in critical condition Saturday evening after being shot twice by unknown assailants, police said.

Steven Sevilla suffered gunshot wounds in the neck and upper spinal cord in the incident which occurred at Ninth Street and Garey Avenue at 9 p.m. Friday, officers reported.

Pomona police officer Boyd Ellerbeck said Sevilla and a friend had stopped their car at the corner of Ninth and Garey when two other cars pulled up on both Sevilla's passenger, Ignacio Garcia, 16, told the officer that two shots were fired from one of the other cars, both hitting Sevilla. Sevilla slumped down in the driver's seat.

The victim was driven to Pomona Valley Community Hospital by Garcia, Ellerbeck noted. He was administered surgery and placed in the intensive care unit.

Police had no description of the suspects, but indicated they were looking for a maroon Datsun which sped away from the scene of the shooting.

Officers found a bullet hole in the windshield of Seyilla's auto.

Some are envoys without countries

Half-diplomats hanging on, 'hoping' for better days

EDITOR'S NOTE: They enjoy many of the personal privileges but are not a part of the official corps. Some are envoys without countries, their nations swallowed by others. Some lost their status when official sympathies toward their homelands changed. But they hang on, these half-diplomats, hoping for better days.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hope is fading for Ken Towsey, the non-envoy from Salisbury who expects soon to be barred from serving in Washington as the head of the Rhodesian Information Office and the voice of the white minority government that pays him.

Towsey, 57, has been here since 1963 and with his status as a resident alien he hopes to retire here rather than return to a country beleaguered.

It's a twilight existence for him and other half-diplomats serving the interests of governments that have vanished or of those still to arise.

The U.S. State Department is obliged to maintain full contact and extend proper facilities to representatives of those countries it still recognizes — mainly the Baltic states.

It also maintains contact with the unaccredited ones.

In addition to the Baltic missions and those who speak for the Palestinians and the emerging Southern African states, there are unofficial ambassadors in Washington or on the fringes of the United Nations pressing causes which their sponsors refuse to consider lost:

—Tibetans wanting to be free from China's rule.

—Croatians aching to break away from the Yugoslav Federation.

—The Basques of North Spain and Southwest France campaigning for, at least, self rule.

—Irishmen raising money for a North-South reunion.

But none has yet claimed diplomatic or even semi-diplomatic recognition.

There are others who fear for their future.

Chief among them are the Chinese of Taiwan who, while claiming to be the rightful rulers of all China, must know their days are numbered as talk goes on in Washington of normalizing relations with Peking. It could be that Taiwan will evolve as an independent state, but it would have to abandon all pretensions to speak in the name of some 800 million Chinese.

The continued existence of the Lithuanian, Latvian and Estonian diplomatic missions in this country may be arguable in terms of those who control those lands. It flows, nevertheless, from a consistent U.S. pledge not to recognize Soviet seizure of those states which border each other along the eastern shores of the Baltic, facing Sweden.

The Soviets' forcible annexation of the Baltic states in 1940 has in Moscow's mind been legalized. But Moscow's concept contrasts sharply with its insistence that Israel free war-won Arab territories on grounds that it is immoral to extend a nation's territory by armed force.

Mission heads who claim to speak for the people of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia — respectively, Dr. Staaya A. Backis, Dr. Anatol Dinbergs and Ernst Jaakson in New York — have a lot of work to do.

Easily more than a million former citizens of the Baltic states live in the United States, forming an influential constituency. And U.S. politicians must consider their feelings relating to the Soviet occupation of their homeland.

Backis, Dinbergs and Jaakson and their immediate accredited staff enjoy all of the privileges of regular diplomats — immunity from prosecution, tax-free goods, Corps Diplomatique plates on their automobiles.

All were accredited diplomats at the time the Soviets took over their countries. All of the Baltic states sought to maintain a semblance of governmental apparatus even in exile. This made it easier for key governments to continue recognizing them.

But their ranks are thinning, and the U.S. State Department, asked if newcomers could continue the old order, explained that the issue of new accreditations has long been under review. There is no definite answer.

When Rhodesia's Towsey first came to Washington in 1963 he was the official in charge of the Rhodesian section of the British Embassy. Rhodesia was then part of the Central African Federation. When Prime Minister Ian D. Smith in 1965 proclaimed Rhodesia's independence from Britain, defying all constitutional law, Towsey moved from the British Embassy to head a "Rhodesian Information Office." Lacking formal U.S. recognition, Towsey quickly became the acknowledged ambassador-out-of-the-ordinary for the breakaway British colony.

HALF-DIPLOMAT

Ken Towsey is one of Washington's "half-diplomats," who expects soon to be barred from his post as head of the Rhodesian Information Office in which he poses for this photograph. U.S. policy has switched from one of sympathy and cooperation to one of surface hostility to the white minority government that he serves. It's a twilight existence for him and other not-quite envoys and ambassadors-out-of-ordinary.

Opposition to voters' change is studied

The Los Angeles County Board of Supervisors will be asked Tuesday to officially oppose a federal bill that would permit people to register to vote on the same day they cast their ballots.

The legislation is proposed by President Jimmy Carter as a way of streamlining the election laws. He claims it would increase voter turnout.

However, the county's election commission, and Registrar of Voters Leonard Panish contend that such a law would encourage election frauds.

Panish contends the reform law would make it possible for people to vote more than once.

The bill is expected to go to the floor of the House of Representatives Tuesday.

Tri-community meet is slated

Tri-community residents with questions concerning land use, zoning and planning matters in the Alta Loma, Cucamonga and Etiwanda area are invited to meet with county planners at the Rancho Cucamonga Library, 9161 Base Line Road, from 6 to 9 p.m. Tuesday.

Hobbyist creates artistry in wood

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — Like an artist with oils or a gourmet cook, Al Greenler mixes a lot of little pieces into something lovely to behold.

His little pieces are wood. His artistry is parquetry — the inlaying of woods of different tones and shapes to achieve a blend that is pleasing to the eye.

His end product is also utilitarian in the form of table tops, cribbage boards, chess boards and pieces of furniture.

Greenler, 76, is a retired railroad and postal worker who has been at his hobby since the depression days of the early '30s when he built a power saw from dime store parts. It was a far cry from the power tools now lining his home workshop.

So is his work. His first try was an end table that won honorable mention in a hobby show. The latest efforts have earned him grand awards in four of the eight annual golden age hobby shows Greenler has entered.

"I just can't tell you how it's done," he says of his full-time pastime. "But you can watch. I'll tell anything I know if people just follow me around."

Greenler works with 56 different woods — black ebony from the Indies, gray ebony from Africa, vermilion from South America, koa from the Philippine Islands, teak from Asia, and many native American woods.

"The design grows in my mind," he said while working at an intricate inlaid corner design for a table top.

Greenler said he used no stain to alter the color of natural woods.

Bid looms for drive through local mall

Pomona City Council Monday night will receive an official request from downtown property owners seeking to have the Pomona Mall between Garey Avenue and Locust Street torn out and replaced with a fully developed street.

The request, through the Pomona Chamber of Commerce, is endorsed by all the property owners on that section of the mall.

Replacing the mall with a street, if approved by the council, would also require reopening Locust Street to through traffic between First and Third streets.

The request comes in conjunction with the Chamber of Commerce's plans to tear down the old Owl Drug Store building on the south side of the mall at Garey Avenue.

Other items on the 8 p.m. agenda include a presentation by representatives from the Pomona City Employes Association, which is currently embroiled in protracted salary negotiations with the city.

Between peoples of America, France

LaFayette commission marked start of 200-year friendship

By DON McLEOD
Associated Press Writer

When France entered the war for American independence and turned the tide toward the ultimate victory, George Washington turned to his young French protege and said, "You have done more than anybody to bring about this great event."

For Marie-Joseph-Paul-Yves-Roch-Gilbert du Motier, the Marquis de La Favette, was not the ordinary European adventurer come to reap fortune and fame from the American tragedy.

He was one of the richest young men on the Continent and one of the more socially prominent. His family had been important for at least eight centuries, and by marriage he was linked to one of the foremost clans in France.

His American adventure, begun with a storybook defiance of king and family, caught the fancy of his nation.

La Fayette was born on the family estate in the province of Auvergene on Sept. 6, 1757. His grandfather had died in battle and his father, away campaigning in the seven years war with England, would die two years later in the battle of Minden.

Consequently, the young Marquis was raised in a world of women with the memory of brave men. "The seed of self-esteem and even of ambition" became evident early in his development, and he admitted "I was all on fire to have a uniform."

After completing his military training at the Academy of Versailles with the sons of the other first families, he joined the corps of Black Musketeers of his grandfather and then the Noilles Regiment of his wife's family.

La Fayette's commanding officer, the Count Charles - Francois de Broglie, was an ardent sympathizer with the American cause, and in the summer of 1775 gave a dinner for the Duke of Gloucester, brother of the English king but a doubter on the American question.

Before the evening was through, La Fayette claimed he was determined to go to America and join the fight for freedom. Perhaps he was a young man with no other battlefield who wanted to follow family tradition of bravery, but of America he told his young wife he left behind: "In working for my glory, I work for their happiness."

Although Silas Deane, the American representative in Paris, lacked such authority, he was so impressed with La Fayette that he promised the Marquis a commission in the Continental Army.

La Fayette's father-in-law, the powerful Duc d'Ayes, did not take kindly to the idea. "This sort of thing is all very well for the Vicomte de Noilles (a young relative also bent on American adventure), who is strong, energetic, and sufficiently determined to undertake anything," the Duc said, "but what on earth would you find to do over there?"

Despite the Duc's rages, royal disapproval and even an arrest warrant, La Fayette chartered a ship and sailed for America.

To help pull off his departure, he went to London while arrangements were being made secretly for his voyage. He visited his wife's uncle, the French ambassador, and was presented to George III, an effective smokescreen which foretold his audacity and cunning.

The opposition was so furious that La Fayette had to sail without returning to Paris to bid farewell to his pregnant wife. But she understood, as did most of France. His exploits had made him a national hero before he ever reached America.

But America was another matter. Foreign volunteers were not always welcome. American officers were jealous of them. Washington found most recruits from Europe "only a new source of embarrassment."

Congress usually dealt with Deane's recruits by sending them to Washington, who had to find places for them or discourage them as politely but as forcefully as possible.

What chance then for a boyish officer who spoke little English, had no real experience at war and demanded to be a general? When he said he wanted only to serve as an unpaid volunteer wherever Washington might need him, he was accepted.

This Wednesday, July 27, is the bicentennial of his commissioning and an important first seed of the alliance which would win American independence and survive almost without interruption for the two centuries since.

La Fayette adored Washington, perhaps as the idealized father he had never known.

"He is a man truly made for this revolution which, but for him, could never have been brought about," La Fayette wrote. "I admire him more and more every day that passes, the beauty of his mind and character."

And the austere commander-in-chief took to the eager young aristocrat. Despite his obvious deficiencies, La Fayette represented perhaps what Washington needed most, an officer who was willing to obey orders.

Even if Washington may have exaggerated the youth's part in the French alliance, it was not by much. La Fayette became the most persuasive voice calling France to arms.

"With the help of France we shall, though at some cost, carry to victory the cause which I have at heart because it is a just one; because it does honor to mankind; because it is of importance to my country ..." he wrote home.

As the Revolution approached decision, Washington entrusted La Fayette with defense of his beloved Virginia. Britain's Lord Cornwallis scorned. "The boy," he sneered, "cannot escape me."

But the boy general feinted and retreated with the skill of a Fabian and drew Cornwallis into the final trap at Yorktown, where a French fleet and thousands of French soldiers and sailors helped win American independence.

La Fayette could not have known then that the Revolution would soon spread to his own country, or that it would take a turn which would clash with the kind of liberty he had learned in America.

But he did know that he had helped shape a nation which would be a great force in the shape of the world.

"The prosperity of America is linked with the prosperity of all mankind," he believed. "She will become the sure and worthy asylum of virtue, honesty, tolerance, equality and tranquil liberty."

Cleaning 'fluid' causes cancer

WASHINGTON (AP) — The most commonly used dry cleaning fluid causes cancer in mice and may be harmful to laundry patrons and workers, the National Cancer Institute says.

The NCI findings, due to be published in the Federal Register about Sept. 1, are based on a two-year test of perchloroethylene, or "perc."

Up to 65 per cent of the male mice who lived through two years of testing got liver cancers. Forty per cent of the female mice developed cancer.

The NCI said 100,000 workers could be threatened in addition to customers of the country's 18,000 coin operated cleaning establishments.

Only 22 schools in the country

Educational prospects dim for most veterinary aims

EDITOR'S NOTE: Job prospects are fairly bright for at least one group of college students — doctors of veterinary medicine. Trouble is, there are only 22 vet schools in the country, which makes prospects dim for getting in.

By WILLIAM PRATER
Associated Press Writer

URBANA, Ill. (AP) — A desire of young people to return to the land, and an awareness of yet another profession open to women, is putting the squeeze on the nation's veterinary schools.

Officials say there are six fully qualified applicants for each vet school vacancy, compared with three for each medical school opening.

At the University of Illinois last fall there were 500 applicants — more than double the number in 1970 — for 76 vacancies in the veterinary school. Even more might have applied, but the school actively discouraged prospective students and didn't consider anyone from out of state.

"We really feel that with such a large demand by Illinois residents that we have to accept Illinois applicants first," Dean Richard Dierks said in an interview.

Dierks says this attitude prevails among officials of the nation's 22 veterinary schools, making the prospects dismal for would-be animal doctors in the 26 states with no veterinary schools.

Oddly, it is mostly the folks in wide-open cattle country who are being shut out of the profession. Between the Pacific Ocean and Iowa only California, Colorado and Washington maintain veterinary schools. Washington shares the costs with Idaho and Oregon.

To ease a similar situation in the South, four new veterinary schools have opened in the past five years: At the University of Tennessee, Mississippi State University, University of Florida and Louisiana State University.

The vacuum in states without vet schools is drawing graduates from states like Illinois, where about half of the 1976 class moved out of state. However, officials say some of these young vets may be going through a voluntary internship and eventually will return home.

Dierks says there is an obvious need for veterinarians in every state, but the stumbling block is money.

"It costs $40 million to $50 million to start up a plant from scratch, and $5 million to $8 million to maintain it each year. States without a large population base just can't afford the expense," he says.

Why the incredible interest in the veterinary profession?

Dierks believes it's because of "the whole movement back to the land, out of the city — a generation of young people wanting to work in ecology, energy or nature."

"Well, I've always worked with livestock on the farm, and I like them," says Tom Rogers, 17, of Clinton, who will enter the University of Illinois this fall as a freshman. "Veterinarians get pretty high pay, too. But it means rotten hours and rotten work if you don't like animals."

"You've got to remember, too, that one-third of our entering class the last two years has been female," says Dr. H.S. Bryan, assistant dean of admissions at Illinois.

"Part of the reason for the pressure is that females have discovered the profession now. Before, this was an all-male field."

Bryan says a survey of the entering class of 1976 showed that "81 per cent of our successful applicants were not farm-reared." Thirty per cent came from large cities.

The American Veterinary Medicine Association, based in Schaumburg, Ill., is financing a manpower study to see whether the job market for vets will support a mushrooming number of graduates.

"The answer is about a year away," says Dr. R.L. West, the association's director of scientific activities, "but we know the (job market) demand is considerably less than the demand to get into the colleges."

At Illinois, Dr. Bryan says he expects the "usual two or three solid job offers" for every graduate.

Starting salaries for vets average $17,500, but Dr. Bryan says that a big-city pet doctor can make up to $200,000 a year after expenses.

Schools are adding about 2,500 veterinarians a year to a work force estimated at 30,000. Of the existing professionals, says West, about 9,300 are in small animal practices, mostly treating pets in cities.

Another 9,000 are small-town practitioners with a clientele of pets and farm animals, and 1,800 treat only farm animals. The remainder work for regulatory agencies, the military or schools.

Most colleges have eliminated pre-vet programs. Bryan says Illinois dropped its program three years ago because "too many qualified people were not getting admitted (to the College of Veterinary Medicine) ... and it caused heartaches beyond anything we could cope with."

Tom Rogers, named Illinois Star Farmer of 1977 by the Future Farmers of America, has enrolled in animal science.

"You keep your grades up, cross your fingers and hope for the best," he says. "If I can't get in, I'll still have a useful degree, and I can go back and farm."

One state without a veterinary school is Wisconsin, where dairy farms are a major industry.

Albert Beaver, academic planner for the University of Wisconsin, says that about 400 Wisconsin students are enrolled in some type of pre-vet program. Their only hope to become veterinarians is to win one of 17 spaces available to Wisconsin residents each year through a reciprocal agreement with the University of Minnesota. "Students get counseled out" of enrolling, he says.

State officials are considering several options to improve the situation, Beaver says, including paying Minnesota up to $12,000 per student to increase Wisconsin's allotment in the vet school from 17 to 35.

The legislature also is considering building a veterinary school in the state. Using some existing facilities, it would cost at least $25 million to build, Beaver says, and $4 million to $5 million a year to operate.

The University of Wisconsin is not endorsing the proposal, he adds. "While there is a need for a veterinary school in the state, we have other resource needs that are just as pressing."

In 'state of deterioration'

Blair House flair is not as 'elegant' as in past

By JURATE KAZICKAS
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Blair House, which has been the temporary home of presidents and kings, is now decorated in a style that is "tasteless, inappropriate and of inferior quality," a government report says.

Rooms with discordant color schemes, peeling wallpaper and a library collection that is "in a serious state of deterioration" are some of the unhappy features the report noted in the 35-room Georgian mansion across Pennsylvania Avenue from the White House.

Blair House is the official guest residence for foreign dignitaries and has housed such world leaders as Queen Elizabeth II, Charles de Gaulle, Nikita Khrushchev and King Saud of Saudi Arabia.

President Harry S. Truman lived there during renovation of the White House and President Carter stayed there last fall while he waited to take office.

And prior to the new government report, Blair House for 153 years survived numerus redecorations, changes of administration, termites and the ghost of Millard Fillmore's treasury secretary, which is said to reside there sometimes.

The four page report on the state of Blair House decor was prepared by a private consultant. It was commissioned by the National Park Service, which maintains National Historic Landmarks. Blair House has been a National Landmark since 1937.

The report criticized "unsatisfactory" provisions for the maintenance of the house and especially the lack of money for replacing such items as curtains and bedspreads.

But Evan Dobelle, the administration protocol chief, said, "Blair House is not falling apart. There's nothing major wrong with it. This is a superbly run place, maintained as adepuately as possible with the understanding that this is not an extravagant administration."

Dobelle did agree with one specific criticism — that two bathrooms renovated in 1976 were of "mediocre modern design" and in "color schemes which are discordant with adjacent rooms."

But Dobelle said it was not "financially feasible" to change the bathrooms, which, mercifully, are used by "middle echelon" visitors and not by someone like its recent visitor, Israeli Prime Minister Menahem Begin.

Peeling wallpaper in the bathrooms, was a result of some "flooding from minor plumbing problems," but has been repaired, he said.

Peg Murray, assistant manager of Blair House, sighed, "We feel very protective of Blair House. We only want the best publicity. But the house does need refurbishing. Curtains do wear and there are no funds. We just have to live with what we have."

She said she tries to put the best light on the problem areas by use of such things as fresh flowers. "When some things get a little shabby, then you just make other things nice and shiny," she said.

The report was prepared by 24-year-old consultant Kristina Butvydas, who said that during her visit to Blair House she was perplexed to feel the floor shaking in the dining room.

Dobelle said heavy machinery or traffic outside sometimes causes that section of the floor to vibrate.

Dobelle said "proper items" — antiques in keeping with the Federalist period of the house — are simply not affordable.

'One of the best in the country'

Consumer champion—Minx Auerbach 'manages' best

EDITOR'S NOTE: Ralph Nader may capture the national headlines, but it is people like Minx Auerbach who are responsible for the day-to-day defense of the average consumer. Mrs. Auerbach is the director of the consumer affairs office in Louisville, Ky., and experts in the field say she's one of the best in the country. Here's a look at how she works.

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Listen to Minx Auerbach talk about her job of protecting the consumers of Louisville:

"I managed to get the supermarkets to agree ..."

"Here's how we managed to get the bill passed ..."

"I can manage to get the doctors to ..."

One word stands out.

Other consumer advocates may file complaints, urge boycotts and launch campaigns. Minx Auerbach manages.

In three years, she has managed to build a consumer affairs department that is considered by government and private experts in the field to be one of the best in the country.

At the height of public concern over soaring food prices, she managed to get one of the area's largest supermarket chains to sit down with consumers to discuss costs.

She managed to persuade some of the city's leading businessmen to support a consumer bill that gave her office strong legal powers. "I explained to them that it was to their advantage to cooperate."

She also managed to set up urban gardens on public land and persuaded the fire department to allow use of hydrants for watering the crops.

And she managed to get the cooperation of the county medical society to develop a doctors' directory, including prices. The first doctor to volunteer for listing was Mrs. Auerbach's husband, an orthopedic surgeon.

A lot of the conflict between consumers and business stems from a lack of communication, Mrs. Auerbach says. "I've always tried to work with people who were on the other side. That avoids unpleasantness."

She researches subjects extensively before she acts, whether she is documenting the need for a consumer protection bill or deciding what to serve Ralph Nader for dinner. "I was very careful to serve fruit and cheese for dessert. No junk foods."

An attractive, athletic 55-year-old — her husband gave her a tandem bicycle for her most recent birthday — Mrs. Auerbach was appointed by Mayor Harvey Sloane in 1974 to set up a department of consumer affairs.

Today, the department has an annual budget of $150,000, of which $12,000 goes for rent and $19,800 for Mrs. Auerbach's salary. She has a staff of 10½ — "I've asked for 11" — which she supplements with student interns from local colleges and universities.

Three employes handle the complaints — about 150 a month — on everything from landlord-tenant relations to marriage counseling. Mrs. Auerbach brags that "no complaint is in the office for more than three days without some action being taken."

There are four inspectors in the weights and measures division, a full-time lawyer and the equivalent of 1½ employes working on consumer education.

Mrs. Auerbach has taken businesses to court for shortweighting. She pushed for — and got — a charitable solicitation act to regulate fund raisers. The city's cab industry is about to come under the control of her department. Twice a month, she appears on "Consumer Corner," an information program broadcast by the local ABC-TV affiliate.

"I've accomplished more than I thought I could," she says.

"I've established a department that has a strong credibility in the community. We have a strong consumer ordinance. We've cleaned up the charitable solicitation racket. We've provided consumers with alternative ways of buying ..."

The alternatives she talks about are among Mrs. Auerbach's most visible achievements: urban gardens, a farmers' market and a city cannery. All are located on city land set aside for urban renewal.

The farmers' market began three years ago with 10 participants. Today, there are 33 who rent the stalls to sell their produce directly to consumers. Originally, the market operated only one day a week, but it has been expanded to three days.

Mrs. Auerbach set up a cannery in an old fire hall slated for demolition. In season, it is open seven days a week, offering area residents the chance to put up their own produce more cheaply and efficiently than they could at home.

Sloane's term as mayor — and Mrs. Auerbach's as consumer affairs adviser — expires at the end of this year. Sloane cannot succeed himself, and the candidate Mrs. Auerbach supported in the mayoral primary in May was defeated. She doesn't know whether she will be reappointed or if she would accept the position.

A graduate of the University of Miami with a degree in education, Mrs. Auerbach has no formal training in consumer affairs. She had been a teacher and an organizer in such community activities as day care centers when Sloane asked her to tackle the consumer job.

Officially, she works an eight hour day. Unofficially, she says, "You're really always on duty. I do a tremendous amount of reading. I do speaking at night and write my own speeches."

She enjoys the work. "There is so much room for things to be done at all levels. I get a real feeling of accomplishment, a marvelous feeling of helping people."

Wall Street

Waiting for some relief

By CHET CURRIER
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The latest government figures on consumer prices this past week left Wall Street still waiting for relief from the persistent inflation worries dogging the stock market.

Recent declines in commodity prices and the wholesale price index had given rise to hopes that the uptrend in the consumer price index would at least ease off a bit in June.

But the Labor Department's report on Thursday showed the CPI rising another 0.6 per cent during the month, matching May's 7.2 per cent annual rate.

The current rate, of course, is considerably better than the two-digit pace of a few years ago that was a major factor behind the 1973-74 bear market.

But Wall Street analysts point out that it still has some serious negative implications for stock prices.

Leon G. Cooperman, chairman of the investment policy committee at Goldman, Sachs & Co., recently observed that even a basic inflation rate of 6 per cent a year was "unacceptably high."

"Simply stated, an inflation rate of 6 per cent over a long period of time is both terrifying and debilitating," he wrote.

In an inflationary environment, Cooperman noted, investors evidently perceive a higher risk in stocks and thus are willing to pay less for them in relation to their expected dividend yields.

Based on a 4 per cent "risk premium" oyer current bond yields and expected dividend growth of 7.5 per cent a year, Goldman Sachs analysts calculated that the theoretically justified level of the Dow Jones industrial average was 920.

That's just about exactly where the average stands after a 17.47 gain in the past week to a Friday close of 923.42.

Standard & Poor's 500-stock index chimed in with a 1.49 gain to 101.67, and the New York Stock Exchange composite index was up .72 at 55.71.

Uncertainty of business

Memphis companies show 'fickleness' of market

By MICHAEL L. GECZI
AP Business Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The uncertainty of business is no more vividly illustrated than in the fortunes of two Memphis, Tenn., companies — Cook Industries, Inc., and Union Planters National Bank.

The directions taken by those two concerns — both well known nationally and internationally — are good examples of the fact that nothing is predictable in corporate life.

Just a few short years ago, the concerns were speeding full-steam in opposite directions. Cook, under the tutelage of chairman E. W. 'Ned' Cook, was a high-flying commodities company that had grown to become one of the five-largest grain exporting firms in the country.

The company's young, aggressive staff, said to be among the best-paid in the industry, came up with coup after coup in arranging huge grain sales abroad. Between 1972 and 1974, Cook's pretax earnings skyrocketed to $80 million from $4 million. The company was the pride of the city.

At the same time, there also was another company in the city that was attracting headlines in newspapers around the country. But most of the space being devoted to Union Planters — UP — was dealing with the $742.5 million deposit bank's financial troubles, and the plethora of lawsuits implicating members of the bank's management were involved in fraud and kickback schemes.

While observers were praising the successes of Cook, they were wondering out loud when UP would go down for the third time into the nearby Mississippi River. The bank had a loss of nearly $17 million in 1974 and a deficit of $2.8 million a year later.

It hasn't happened. In fact, now, just a few short years later, the situation is reversed. UP apparently has pulled itself up from the basement — at one time it had been labeled by the U.S. Comptroller of the Currency as the No. 1 troubled bank in the country — and Cook is being hit by financial chaos that threatens its very existence.

Business watchers attribut' the shifts to the company's top officers — Cook, and UP's chairman and chief executive officer, William M. Matthews Jr. They say that as Cook Industries' successes mounted, Cook delegated more and more authority to his top management. With that delegation of authority went the internal controls that could have prevented Cook's current status.

The situation at Union Planters is different. Matthews' 16and 18-hour days already are legend in the area. And his oneman-rule manner has turned off many townspeople, as well as colleagues. But in the three years he has spent at the Memphis bank, he has been able to turn a nearly hopeless situation around.

Just last week, Union Planters reported its second quarter results, and the numbers gave further proof that the bank is, indeed, on its way to financial recovery. The company's parent, Union Planters Corp., reported net income of $471,193, or 15 cents a share, for the quarter. That put the firm's first half earnings at $784,559, or 25 cents a share, compared with a net loss of $2.7 million, or 86 cents a share, a year before.

Though the profit figures are small by major bank standards, they nonetheless are significant advances by UP. First of all, they represent operating earnings. And secondly, they look extremely good when compared with the massive deficits that had been commonplace at the bank.

The turnaround hasn't been easy, Matthews says, citing a 33 per cent cut in employes and a key trimming in the savings account interest rate last December. But so far, his decisions have been accompanied by a Midas touch — everything is turning to gold.

"I had to be aggressive to turn this bank around," the 44-year-old executive says. "The situation when I came here was just unbelievable.

"We had low-level employes, making $12,000 a year, who were wearing diamond rings and driving to work in Continentals. Nobody in the previous management ever thought to ask how they could afford it. Now we have enough ex-employees in jail to open a branch."

Matthews' aggressiveness also is paying off in the electronic banking area, where UP has taken a huge lead in Memphis that augurs well for its future. Matthews claims, as do some bank analysts, that UP is in the forefront of banks in the country in electronic banking.

IT'S THEIR BAG — Bag-makers at the St. Regis paper bag plant in Vernon near Los Angeles, have their names printed (above) on the bottom of their products. Quality control had been a problem, officials said, but the new system has saved the company nearly $500,000 on returns so far. Workers hand-riffle each batch since the system was adopted.

Sherinda distribution rights set

SHERMAN OAKS (BW) — Sherinda International Inc. (OTC), has granted U.S. institutional distribution rights for Insta-Cup to Specialized Marketing Inc. of La Jolla, Calif.

Insta-Cup is a plastic container with a sealed inset containing dried mixes for hot or cold beverages and soup. The addition of hot or cold water creates an instant drink.

Insta-Cup products are presently being marketed and sold in Canada to offices, schools and supermarkets.

Insta-Cup is a patented product of Insta-Cup of Toronto, Canada, of which Sherinda owns 36½ per cent, and an option to acquire an additional 49 per cent.

Under terms of the agreement, Specialized Marketing will pay Sherinda $100,000 cash by Aug. 1, pay or provide $150,000 worth of patented equipment for the U.S. manufacture of Insta-Cup, pay 10 cents to 11½ cents per cup and 50 per cent of the pretax profits on sales greater than 15 cents per cup.

The agreement permits Specialized Marketing to grant sub-distributorships and sub-licenses with Sherinda's approval.

Any monies derived from sub-distributorships and sub-licencees shall be divided equally between Sherinda and Specialized Marketing.

"Minimum required purchases by Specialized Marketing are relatively small during the first two years of the agreement but rise to 25 million cups per year beginning June 1, 1980," Jack Rubenstein president of Sherinda, said.

The agreement excludes sales to grocery stores, supermarkets, convenience food stores and military establishments.

With 'Crisis Intervention Center'

Austria seeks to cut its high suicide rate

VIENNA (AP) — Statistics here reveal Austria is faced with one of the world's highest suicide rates — and the government has decided to do something about it.

Health Minister Ingrid Leodolter announced recently that the Austrian government would in future cosponsor the world's first publicly financed antisuicide center — officially named "Crisis Intervention Center."

In 1975, 1,813 Austrians — 70 per cent of them men — committed suicide. On an average, 24 of every 100,000 Austrians kill themselves in despair. The Austrian population is 7.5 million.

"This is a dramatic warning signal of a crisis in which many of our citizens find themselves," the minister said as she officially opened the center, jointly funded by the government, trade unions, health insurance institutes and charity groups.

Professor Erwin Ringel, who in 1948 opened Europe's first antisuicide institute, then financed by Caritas, a Catholic welfare organization, also heads the new "extramural" center, so called because it operates outside established psychiatric clinics and hospitals.

Any Viennese suddenly faced with seemingly insurmountable problems in life may call the Vienna telephone number, which is manned from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m., and the 12-member team of specialists, including psychiatrists, social workers, psychologists, a legal expert and a clergyman, is ready to help.

Organizers hope the center will soon operate around the clock. Other such publicly funded centers are being contemplated in four other Austrian provinces.

Ringel said at the opening: "The pioneering element, one which will be pace-setting in the world, is the fact that for the first time the state as a whole has felt obliged to make suicide prevention a national cause."

Ringel believes that the basis for potential suicides is laid as early as childhood when "neurotization" occurs. Egotism and aloofness are other causes, he believes.

"Outwardly, there is evidence of Austrian easygoing gemutlichkeit, but there is no readiness to help, no solidarity behind this cliche," he said.

Asked why Austria was upon the suicide list, Ringel told the Associated Press:

"This is almost impossible to explain. In absolute terms we have indeed a forbiddingly high number of suicides in Austria.

"We have conducted several scientific surveys. One joint U.S.-Austrian study clearly showed different attitudes toward suicide here and in America.

"In Los Angeles, one would say of a suicide: 'Oh, what a shame, we'll miss him.' In Vienna they'd say: 'Good for him, it's all over for him now, and he is under earth'," Ringel said.

He added, "This shows there is less human solidarity here, and we have to work hard toward achieving an antisuicidal climate in Austria in the first place."

Ringel is convinced that dedicated work toward preventing suicides will be successful in the long run.

Ringel said he was hopeful other similar centers would emerge.

Pilot 'program' scoring against gang violence

Crime curbs apparently successful in Pomona

Progress Bulletin

Pomona, California ■ Sunday, July 24, 1977

By ED PRATHER
PB Staff Writer

A special pilot program intended to reduce gang violence and crime in Pomona is apparently working, according to the project's directors.

The program's basic function is the placement of Latin gang members in jobs — conditional upon their cooperation in returning to school and staying out of trouble with the law.

It is a program designed to place maximum responsibility on the shoulders of the gang members individually and collectively.

With the city acting as the lead agency, backed by a $100,000 Los Angeles County grant, the project brings together the probation department, school system and family in a coordinated effort to reach active gang members.

About 50 are currently involved in the program.

"It's the first time the probation, school counseling and parental relationships have been used together," said City Administrator Jerrold Gonce, who is the official director of the program.

Enrique Segura, the day-to-day coordinator of the project, said the program operates like this:

The probation department picks out Latin youths who are on probation and known to be active gang members and refers them to the project's center, which is located at the Beta Center.

The gang member is told he will get a job if he returns to school and stays out of trouble at school, at home and in the community.

Those who don't appear willing to cooperate are not accepted into the program.

But jobs being a precious commodity among Latin youths, most have been eager to cooperate, said Segura.

"Since we started in April, not one has been arrested," he explained.

And some of them had long police records.

Although it is difficult to measure how much crime and violence is directly attributable to youth gangs, the fact the participants in the program are not arrested seems to indicate the project is proving successful, said Segura.

Gonce agreed the effectiveness of the program is difficult to measure and may present county staff members some problems when it comes time to evaluate the project when funding expires at the end of September.

'Since we started ...not one has been arrested' — Enrique Segura

If the project is found effective, Gonce said the city will seek to have it continued.

While jobs, on a part-time basis for 14 to 17-year-olds, and full-time, on-the-job training for 18 to 24-year-olds, are the key incentives for each individual gang member, it is the unique design of the program that may be responsible for achieving the goal of reducing overall gang activity.

"It's not happening just by accident," said Gonce.

Each gang member in the program has been told failure will not only cost his own place in the program, but everyone else's as well.

If one gang member messes up, they all pay the price.

And when they are told that, they can believe it. Because the person doing the telling is a member of their own gang or community.

The three liaison staff members of the project were the first three participants, all selected by their peer groups.

Cherrieville selected Sandra Perez, the Sharkies chose Tony Cerda Jr. and 12th Street selected Mike Marquez.

"We're very optimistic," said Segura.

"Most of them are super thrilled about their jobs. They've never had an experience like this before," he continued.

He said several participants in the program have already moved on to permanent, full-time jobs.

A couple of others had photo copies of their first paychecks framed.

Not that there haven't been problems. There have been. Some have found the discipline needed on a job tough to live with, but thus far things have generally worked out short of a firing.

"Only one client hasn't worked out," said Segura.

Joey Fuentez, a city staff member who works with the program out of the Community Relations office, said it has been a long time since the gang situation has been as quiet as it is right now.

He said no one expects the project to end all gang problems in Pomona, and certainly not end the gangs themselves.

A lifelong resident of Pomona, Fuentez said the gangs have generations of tradition, and that the only hope is to keep a lid on the situation and avoid the kinds of explosions that can happen if nothing is done.

"I remember back in 1950 and 1951 people on 12th Street were afraid to put their porch light on. It was called 'Little Korea.' We don't want to see that happen ever again," he said.

The Pomona program is one of two pilot projects being funded by Los Angeles County. The other is in the community of Hawaiian Gardens.

MOUTH-WATERING RESULTS

Instructional aid Delena Grow spoons out the metric goodies as the students, Donald Adams, 8, and Shelli Boettcher, 9, on the left, and Billy Jean Neely, 7, and Chris Wheeler, 6, on the right, watch with anticipation. Ingredients were measured in grams, liters and millimeters by the youngsters, who found the exercise both fun and filling.

Students have a 'gram' old time

'Metric munchies' aid class

By JON MORRIS
PB Staff Writer

You'll never guess what the "metric munchies" are.

The recipe calls for cereal, marshmallows and margarine melted together.

That might not be too difficult to concoct, but try measuring everything in grams.

Children at Arroyo School in Ontario are using the metric system to cook with this summer, under the guidance of instructional aide Delena Grow.

Aside from learning how to cook some of Mrs. Grow's favorite recipes, the elementary school youngsters have to measure food in grams, liters and milliliters.

They have gram scales, liter pitchers and metric rulers with which to do measuring.

Mrs. Grow has changed the names of some of her concoctions to fit the summer school class in metrics. "Metric munchies" and "unidentified flying cookies" are just two of her special recipes.

The flying cookies actually are sugar cookies with candy on top. The trick to it, however, is you have to beat together 225 grams of margarine, 165 grams of sugar, 2.5 millileters of water, more sugar, two eggs, five millileters of vanilla.

Sift those items together, says Mrs. Grow, and then add 305 grams of flour, three grams of soda, and five grams of salt. Add M and M's on top.

Take it from Mrs. Grow — measuring in metrics is not easy.

She claims the children are "driving their parents crazy" when they bring home the recipes. "Oftentimes, parents don't have the measures at home to cook with."

Mrs. Grow admits youngsters are not learning how to convert quarts to liters or pounds to grams, but they at least are being taught to use the metric system.

"These kids better know how to use meters," she says, "because we may be converting to that system soon."

Film strips and tapes are utilized to teach the children, and they actually get in there and cook the recipes, she said.

The students even measured popcorn by the meter recently as they watched it fly out of an uncovered popcorn popper. They checked, in meters and centimeters, how far the popcorn went from the popper.

And the school will hold a Metric Olympics at the close of the summer session. Although not directly connected with the cooking class, it will give children a chance to test part of what they've learned. There will be a "javelin throw" (using straws) and a paper plate toss plus foot races.

By the end of summer, the children should be way ahead of their parents in knowledge of the metric system. "The parents get very confused when they try the recipes at home," Mrs. Grow said.

You are my sunshine

Man has fought for centuries over water rights — now there may be disputes over solar rights.

To protect the individual's rights to sunshine and the energy it produces, Los Angeles County Supervisor Kenneth Hahn has asked County Counsel John Larson to develop a county ordinance.

"I can foresee disputes such as shadows from an adjacent building cutting off sunlight or interfering with solar energy," Hahn declared. "I want an ordinance that would forestall such quarrels."

Hahn says solar rights may become a new legal field in the future joining water rights and environmental reports.

THIS IS COOKING?

Joe Katrenich, 7, left, and Jennifer Beach, 7, are measuring ingredients, by weight, for a batch of "metric munchies." Students at the Arroyo Elementary School in Ontario enrolled in a summer class are studying metrics. These students are using metric scales.

Researchers crowd area libraries

Local genealogy studies spurred by 'Roots'

By PHYLLIS CANNON
Asst. City Editor

Interest in genealogy, the study of tracing family histories, over the years has grown steadily in the valley. But since the television program "Roots," a "fantastic" increase in study has taken place.

David Streeter, special collections librarian at the Pomona library, said the Bicentennial "kick" started it, but "Roots" was "the catalyzing agent."

"Roots," a recent eight-part television series based on the novel by the same name by Alex Haley, told the story of Haley's search for his family's roots and drew and enormous viewing audience.

Streeter said that locally interest in genealogical research is so heavy people crowd the special collections section.

"We have so many in there using the materials we wonder where to put them all," said Jane Berryman, president of the Pomona Valley Genalogical Society, an organization formed June 2, 1955, to assist researchers.

The Pomona library, along with libraries in Upland, Covina, West Covina and Los Angeles have materials in great quantity which are valuable to researchers, she added.

Mrs. Berryman of Pomona, an active researcher since 1964, said she finds the study very interesting.

"People do it for many reasons, to find out who they are, who their parents were, to tie their lives into history," she said.

Others may study family history to learn medical ailments of an ancestor, to determine cause of death or to learn physical appearance.

Still others study family history to qualify for certain patriotic and historical societies. Some want to verify a relationship to royalty or nobility.

"Beginners should start with themselves," said Mrs. Berryman. "They should record their own birth and marriage dates and other pertinent immediate-family information.

"They should then interview relatives and search for family burial, school, court, land or church records."

The society meets the second Monday of each month from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Pomona library. Those interested may attend. Following a summer recess, meetings will resume in September.

Most people coming into the society for instruction are 35 years of age and older, Mrs. Berryman said. However, "some schools assign students to trace family histories and then tie their families to history. It really stimulates the students," she said.

Lynne Locke, 30, Claremont, is enrolled in a course entitled "Research and Writing" offered by the Claremont Adult Education program and taught by Josephine Smith.

"I'm just beginning to understand how many sources there are for information," she said. "There are many valuable sources right here in our libraries.

"To me, studying family history is a stabilizing influence. Also, it gives me a sense of history. I have relatives who were killed in the Civil War.

"I have really interesting things to talk about with relatives. I know my relatives in a better way. This is a gift I didn't expect."

Crippling the oil industry

As an energy hungry America casts a wistful eye toward the promising resources of the ocean those sworn to represent her best interest delay.

The President has declared the "moral equivalent of war," but the United States Senate was apparently unnotified.

California's reluctance, perhaps refusal, to handle the oil from Alaska is discouraging, but the Senate's recent decision to stick the government into the oil business is disastrous, if not debilitating.

Jimmy Carter may be fighting a war against energy shortages that could cripple industry and thus the economy of the nation, but his colleagues on Capitol Hill are fighting another war altogether.

Their battle seems to be against the oil industry. Having failed to adequately address the energy problems of the nation the Senate latched onto a scapegoat and with its latest vote is on the verge of strangling it to death.

An Oklahoma senator some years ago accurately predicted what is coming to pass and described the scenario that would make it possible.

He said, laws will be passed making it impossible for the oil industry to adequately produce the needs of the nation at top speed. Once the laws are implemented Congress will turn around and blame the industry for being too slow and the final step will be government-produced oil and gas.

That senator can now see his nightmare growing to fruition. With the passage of the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act Amendments of 1977 the Senate added a complete new layer of bureaucracy to exploring in our most promising frontier.

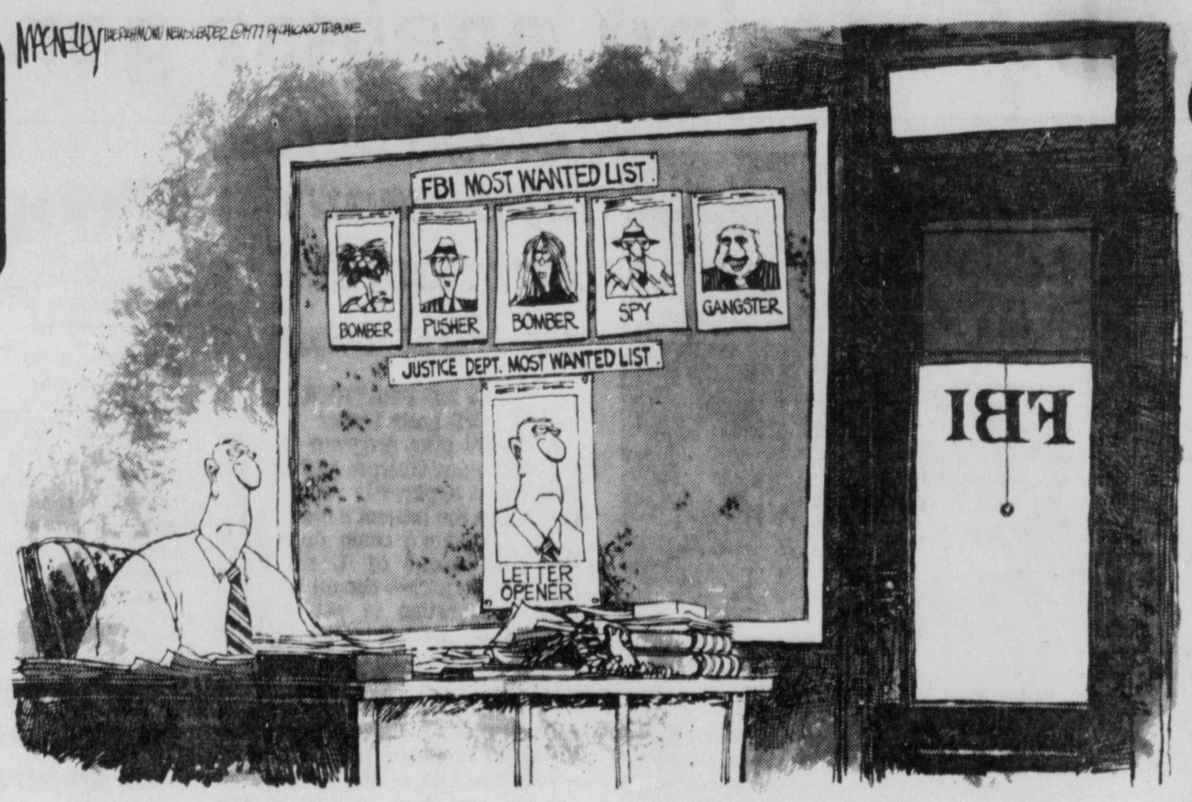

As if a new layer was needed in an area already rife with Interior Department indecision and environmentalist lawsuits.

There is no question that the new requirements of the amendments will extend the time lag between the start of exploration to final production some three to six years.

It already takes eight years. Add six years to that and what you have is a lot of cold winters.

The most frightening action by the Senate requires the Interior Department to get into the drilling business. By hiring people to check out the reserves the Interior Department, for the first time, will involve the government directly in drilling.

Imagine how long that will delay things. Remember the railroads?

Columnist marks anniversary

By EARL G. WATERS

This month marks the anniversary of this column. It was just seven years ago the decision was made to resume writing about California government. It followed a short retirement from more than 30 years under the Capitol dome, first as a reporter and later as a state official.

Launched in two newspapers, it has been the privilege of this writer to address an increasing number of fellow Californians on the affairs of state government and politics. The column has spread to over 61 newspapers having a combined circulation of 979,851. Since generally each copy of a newspaper is read by three or more persons, it would seem appropriate now to thank the readers of this column who may number as many as 3 million for taking time to read our efforts.

Also thanked are the many readers who find additional time to write expressing their reactions. The knowledge that the column is read and provokes response is inspiring. Not all of the letters are laudatory or even in agreement. In fact, many are emphatically in disagreement. We wouldn't want it otherwise for no writer should ever be permitted to believe himself omniscient.

We regret that, not having a secretary, it is physically impossible to answer the letters, many of which are so well thought out. Some, however, suggest future columns and are answered in that manner.

What is attempted in these columns is to report to the people concerning their state government in an unbiased manner. Often the columns seek to interpret what is behind newsbreaking stories and provoke the readers into thinking about these happenings.

It has been the aim here to be complimentary to public officials when they perform exceptionally well and critical when they are below what the people deserve. Wherever possible the effort is to be constructive in criticism, suggesting better ways to do things.

Because human nature is such that usually people do not fire off letters to editors or writers unless their adrenalin has been abnormally stirred, it has been a pleasant surprise to find that most of the mail reflects a near even split between those who agree and those who disagree with thoughts expressed in a given column. To this writer that division confirms objectivity.

Concerned citizens often write, passing on information which they believe may be of aid to us in preparing columns. On occasion there are accounts of possible misdeeds by persons in public office. While some contain sufficient data to permit useage, after careful checking of the information, others serve as leads for the development of columns. The interest of such citizens in their government is appreciated. It is such that makes our form of government a success.

It is also understandable that many fear to give their names. Despite all the assurances made by the press that sources of information remain confidential, not even disclosed to editors, many are justifiably fearful that revealing themselves may cause them trouble, even the loss of their jobs. The fact, unfortunately, is that too many dedicated, honest government employes have suffered serious consequences, including firing, because they spoke out when they witnessed wrongdoing in government.

It is also unfortunate that anonymous letters often point to real problems in government but do not contain sufficient detail to permit a reporter to ferret out the necessary facts.

Still, being a crusader for the public's right to know all about its government, on this anniversary we pledge to continue to battle to provide the information for them.

Bob Dole in 1980?

WASHINGTON — (NEA) — Virtually all the Monday morning quarterhacks agreed after last November's presidential election that Sen. Robert Dole was a major liability to the Republican ticket.

But Dole himself was so heartened by his experience in the national limelight that he is now displaying all the telltale symptoms of White House fever.

The Kansas senator, initially hurt and angered by the critical reviews he received as Gerald Ford's running mate, now shrugs off the slings and arrows with characteristically sardonic wit.

"Ford was in the Rose Garden, I was in the briar patch. If we'd won, my role would have been forgotten. Since we lost, it was my fault," he observed in a recent interview.

Dole seems to have adopted the classic rationalization of every politician with a bad press: never mind what they say about you as long as they spell the name right.

The losing vice-presidential campaign, he said, greatly increased his "visibility" nationwide. "It gave me exposure, experience and contacts." He is quietly seeking to capitalize on all three.

Since the first of the year, Dole has spent almost every weekend on the rubber chicken circuit, traveling to 20 states for speeches to business, civic, ethnic and Republican organizations.

At each stop, he adds to the "contacts" file he started accumulating during last year's campaign. Shades of Jimmy Carter? He has appeared on behalf of other GOP candidates, and will probably step up such activity as the 1978 congressional campaigns heat up. He raised $18,000 for a recent "Salute to Ronald Reagan" here in Washington designed to fill the coffers of a Reagan-led political committee backing conservative Republicans in next year's elections.

In the Senate, Dole is resuming the "point man" role (some say "hatchet man") that he occupied back in 1970-71, sharply challenging Carter administration decisions on issues ranging from farm policy to improving relations with Vietnam and Cuba.

At the end of Jimmy Carter's first hundred days as president, it was Bob Dole — not GOP National Chairman Bill Brock, Senate Minority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. or House Minority Leader John J. Rhodes — who issued a scathing assessment that the new administration was stressing "style over substance."

Next month, he plans a trip to Jerusalem to address a Zionist conference. Israel, of course, is a "must" stop on the 3-I circuit (Italy and Ireland being the other two) which every prospective American presidential candidate feels compelled to hit sooner or later.

All this activity on Dole's part has gone virtually unreported in the press and has not exactly struck terror into the hearts of other would-be GOP presidential contenders.

The prevailing view seems to be that Dole had his chance at national politics, and blew it. Even some of the Ford people are openly scornful of his prospects. "Anybody who would go around insisting that World War II was 'a Democrat war' is not likely to get very far in presidential politics," one top Ford campaign operative said.

Maybe not. But Dole is easy to underestimate. Midway through his last senatorial campaign in Kansas, he was pronounced dead by all the so-called experts. And look who wound up getting re-elected: Bob Dole.

It is worth recalling that some "losers" summarily dismissed by the press and their peers have successfully ignored their lousy notices. Who can forget Richard Nixon's famous "last press conference" of 1962?

Politics is a peculiar business. In an era when the line between fame and notoriety has all but disappeared, all bets are off. As Dole himself says, "who knows what can happen between now and 1980?"

Alligator comeback

The alligator is making a comeback in Florida — so much so that "urban alligators" have become a pest problem in communities bordering the Everglades.

Only a couple of decades ago this descendant of the dinosaurs was in danger of being hunted to extinction. Thanks to a federal ban on the sale of alligator hides and products, it has grown to such numbers that last year the Florida Game and Fresh Water Commission received 10,000 complaints of alligators invading residential canals and swimming pools or sunning themselves in backyards.

Fortunately, the alligators are more of a nuisance than a danger, though they can range up to 12 feet in length. There have been few reported attacks on humans (pets and poultry are another matter), and most Floridians welcome their reappearance.

If these lowly reptiles can survive urbanization, maybe we smart mammals can, too.

Abuses in some nursing homes

WASHINGTON — The old woman slipped up behind us and tugged urgently at our sleeve as we were leaving the nursing home. She was frail and stooped, her face worn, with the outlines of the bone structure showing through. "Please take me home," she said. "I want to go home. Please."

She was a stranger; yet we knew her. She was Everyone's Mother, who had become too old, feeble and, yes, unwanted to keep around the house. So she had been deposited in the nursing home to spend her last days among the living dead. She had been left to wait for her turn to die, painfully lonely, probably neglected and all but forgotten except for an occasional, hurried, awkward visit from a loved one.

This isn't a new story; we've written it many times. But it's the saddest story we are called upon to write. The shameful truth is that Americans increasingly are entrusting their elderly and their consciences to the nation's 23,000 nursing homes. Many homes offer competent, loving care. But many are human garbage dumps, the last stop on the way to the cemetery.

The appalling conditions in these nursing homes are allowed to flourish all too often by public officials who are rewarded for looking the other way. Nowhere is the plight of the elderly more forlorn, we were told, than in Texas. We sent our associate Howie Kurtz to Texas, therefore, to investigate the story.

He found negligence and abuses on the rise. Yet political influence has undermined the attempts to shut down nursing home violators. They have kept the inspectors off their backs by bankrolling the campaigns of the governor, lieutenant governor and dozens of influential state legislators. Some of the lawmakers have even cut themselves in on the action by purchasing convalescent homes.

Kurtz interviewed dozens of witnesses and brought back other incriminating documentation. He found the food inadequate, the care incompetent, the facilities filthy in one home after another. There were examples of outright mistreatment. At one home, six employees recently beat a 76-year-old woman with belts, coat hangers and shoes. Yet three of the workers were later rehired by a different home.

There is evidence of widespread neglect. Urine-soaked sheets and floors, dirty plates and roach-infested kitchens are common in Texas convalescent homes. Ants were seen crawling on the tube of one woman being fed intravenously. Records are so confused that patients are often given the wrong medicine or the wrong dosage. And the daily diets are often meager. At one facility, six or seven chickens were cut up to provide dinner for nearly 100 residents.

All told, about one-third of the nursing homes in Texas are violating federal health standards. Yet few violators receive penalties severe enough to deter them. Occasionally, medicaid payments are temporarily withheld from offending homes. This, however, has had little effect, and the poor conditions often reoccur once the money is restored.

Some well-connected nursing home owners have quashed investigations by getting powerful state legislators to intervene. One state official admitted cautiously that "political pressure has been tried in a few cases. They try to get us to soften the penalties." Other sources told Kurtz that blatant violations are intentionally overlooked — a charge that the state health and welfare departments officially deny.

Despite this sorry record, repeated calls for investigations have produced nothing more than a little uncomfortable squirming inside the pink granite state capitol building at Austin. The Texas Legislature meets for only five months every two years. It is dominated by a few wealthy bankers, businessmen and lawyers. They run it in the wheeling-dealing tradition of Lyndon Johnson and John Connally, whose portraits hang in the chamber.

The most powerful of the legislators have received thousands of dollars in contributions from the Texas Nursing Home Association's political action committee. Efforts to stir up a nursing home investigation, meanwhile, have been stymied by Speaker Bill Clayton, a wealthy farmer, who himself has received contributions from the industry. "We don't want to go chasing shadows on some witch-hunt," Clayton told Kurtz. "We appreciate the contributions, but it's not the way to buy a vote. Only a minority here would feel obligated."

Just in jest

What's wrong with the world today? Now there's a question the answer to which some folks try to turn into a 10-hour lecture. But really the problem is not all that complicated. Solve the population explosion and you've solved everything. Back in the early 1920s when many of today's old timers first started working there were only two billion people in the world. Today the world population has more than doubled that 1920 figure. — So isn't it fortunate those oldsters were able to find jobs before the competition got so tough? Having worked their 50 years and then retired, they are now in a perfect position to tell today's struggling masses that the way to build a brave new world is to do away with people. — New people that is! — Certainly a sufficient number of old people should still be around to make certain the rest of the folks know how to run the world properly.

Think on these things

Let me never take for granted a quiet lane alongside a field of ripe grain. Let me never forget to listen to the songs of a thousand birds — all with something to sing about.

Allow me to see the sky with its wisps of white clouds that turn rose and pink and gold in the evening glow. Let me feel the breezes gentle and filled with the scent of elderberry and grapevine.

Let me never wish for sunshine when the gentle rain is falling, or forget to appreciate the shade of the old oaks when the sun is at its strongest.

Let me appreciate all the fruits the earth yields and all the labor it takes to grow and harvest them. Let me know that this very moment is the life of life — and only I can live my own to the highest and best.

Government prolongs strikes

In critical labor-management disputes government may usefully serve as an arbiter but it should never "take sides."

When government, federal or state, provides unemployment pay to strikers that is taking sides.

In 1971 telephone workers ended a nationwide strike in one week. However, New York City's local remained on strike for another six months. Those strikers had no reason to settle. The state paid them unemployment compensation from a fund maintained by the telephone company.

Thus those New York strikers were able to stay out — to drive a harder bargain.

The forty-one million dollars unemployment compensation they collected ultimately had to be paid by the telephone-using public.

Similarly, our Congress persists in providing food stamps to strikers. A study by the University of Maryland computes that taxpayers paid $100 million last year for food stamps for strikers.

Labor holds the IOU's of a lot of Congressmen. They are unlikely to terminate this strange subsidy. But in mid-June's Supreme Court session a ruling was handed down which just might help.

The Supreme Court, 6-3, decreed that a state is not obligated to provide aid to children whose fathers are on strike.

This was a Maryland test case.

Some prestigious publications, including the Phoenix Arizona Republic, are urging other test cases of other public aid programs.

A more nearly balanced Supreme Court might now be prepared to veto some of the social engineering which has construed as "rights" these continuing handouts of workers' tax dollars to individuals who choose not to work.

Ultimately, all grotesque inequities are their own undoing.

With the mid-June decision the Supreme Court recognized that workers have a perfect right to withhold their services —

As industry has a right to withhold its products from the marketplace —

But neither should be paid to do so at your expense.

'Get with it, Annie' mail

Dear Ann: It's my guess that "Linked to a Kink" is producing a lot of "Get with it, Annie" mail. (The woman's husband wanted her to tie his wrists together, also his ankles, as a sexual turn-on.)

You seem to believe the "bondage game" is sadistic. Practiced by mutual consent, with intelligent limits, it is one of the most exciting games two people can play.

The primary sex organ is the brain. New experiences open the mind to higher levels of enjoyment. This is what bondage practitioners attempt to accomplish. It adds a spark of variety to a very basic human experience.

If "Linked" were to join in her husband's fantasy she might like it a great deal. It surely couldn't hurt. Then again, she might not enjoy it but she should at least give it a try.

You were wrong to nix the idea. Please don't inhibit your readers, Ann. Help them get the most out of life. — Informed

Dear In: I have been neither annointed nor appointed to nix or put a stamp of approval on anything two people choose to do in the privacy of their bedroom. If it's all right with them, it's all right with me.

The woman wanted to know if it was "wrong." I told her no, not if it helped her husband's performance — which it did. When she asked if it was "kinky" I said yes — which it is. If she wants him to tie her up also, they will have to get a third party into the act to do the tying and untying — or maybe I am so dumb I can't figure the thing out. Any sex that involves more than two people is kinky so far as I am concerned.

Dear Ann Landers: I sent you a poem five years ago. I was only 13 then and so proud of myself because you let me contribute to your column. The reason I sent it was because my mother was a heavy smoker and when I asked her to quit for my sake she said, "I'll try but I can't promise."

When my poem appeared in your column she quit. I think it might help a lot of people who may not have seen it when it ran in 1972 and perhaps many who saw it may have forgotten it by now. So, Ann, please run it again. It may be corny, but it makes sense. Thank you. — ABC

No strain for male canary

DEAR DR. MILLER: Mr. Sunshine flunked out last year with Goldie, but made it this year with Hennie — she's raising two babies now. Would it be too much for Mr. Sunshine if I got another canary for him next year? Besides Hennie, I mean. Can a male canary handle two wives? — P.W.

DEAR P.W.: Depending on the shape Mr. Sunshine is in, he should not only enjoy the challenge, but he is fully capable of meeting it. Two shouldn't tax him in the least. A ratio of one male canary for every eight hens is often used successfully. The females should be in separate birdoirs, however, and jealousy can be minimized by discreetly placing screens so that the females are unable to observe each other, (and, obviously, the circulating Mr. Sunshine).

DEAR DR. MILLER: Is the horse laugh on me? I told bridge party friends they treat racehorses for arthritis, because I was told that myself. Now I need to know for sure. Do they really treat racehorses for arthritis? Or do they even get it? — D.E.

DEAR D.E.: Indeed, arthritis is distressingly common in racehorses, and yes, the affected joints are treated by blistering, firing, joint injections of cortisone, and (often most effectively) by joint injections of Nahyaluronate. Arthritic racehorses don't win many races, but response to treatment is considered good when the horse imporves enough to at least try.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Mousie's always been used to two meals a day, but she gets so excited at meal time. She's an excitable dog, anyway. I'm wondering if it would calm her down some to switch her to one meal a day. Mouse, by the way, is a mostly hound dog. — E.R.

DEAR E.R.: Since Mouse's meal time is obviously a highlight of her day (it is for most dogs), making her miss half the fun is probably a mistake. Most nervous dogs, and many simply bored ones, do better on two meals a day than one, since it provides two happy times instead of one, reducing monotony and also recuding possible tension related to hunger. Many dogs now seemingly doing well on a single meal a day, would do even better on two, assuming the total quantity of food is merely split in two, not doubled.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I have a sharna thrush. (They're from India, you know). He's a beautiful singer and seems in fine shape, but he has this weird habit — he bathes three times a day. He seems to enjoy it, I hate to deprive him, but won't he get water-logged? He's not, after all, a duck. — C.A.

DEAR C.A.: Waterfowl he isn't, but water lover he definitely is. It's normal for the species, and there's no hazard involved as long as he's not chilled.

Wine experts intimidating

A new class has been added to this country, right up there with the polo players, yacht owners, spa seekers, jet setters, and women who can wear a Diane Von Furstenberg wrap-around without a pin in the cleavage.

These are called wine experts, and they intimidate everyone.

Ever since my husband read a book on wines, he has treated me like Eliza Doolittle with her hand caught in the gravy.

"I wish you wouldn't order wine at dinner anymore," he said irritably, "until you have some command of the vocabulary."

"I don't know what you are talking about," I said. "What's vocabulary got to do with drinking wine?"

"Everything," he said. "You do not sit there with the whole table awaiting your assessment of the wine, belt it down in one gulp, pound the table and say, 'Wow! This'll put hair on your chest.' "

"What would you have said?"

"I would have said it was robust . . . very complex . . . but never pretentious."

"Same thing."

"It is not the same thing," he said evenly. "Frankly, I think you could take a lesson from Ethel and Eric Birdbeak. Did you see the way Eric took the wine glass the other night, held it precisely 11½ inches from his nose, swirled the glass ever so gently, sniffed its aroma for exactly three seconds, then touched his tongue to it and said, 'It has a heavy body, good nose, and a lingering aftertaste.' "

"Are you sure he was talking about the wine? He just described Ethel."

"Then when Ethel lifted her glass, she closed her eyes and, like a prayer coming from her lips, she chanted, 'It's an aromatic bouquet, so young, and quite fruity.' "

"And she just described Eric!"

"All I am saying is," he said, "If you don't understand the terminology, then don't order the wine. I suspect good wines are wasted on you anyway."

He shouldn't have challenged me like that. At dinner last night, I served the wine from a basket and was very proper in pouring half a finger into his wine glass for his discriminating taste.

I waited. He touched his tongue to it, then proclaimed to the guests, "I find this reminiscent of old Spanish ambience . . . it's so titillating to the senses. What clarity and aroma! What is it?" he asked.

It was Kool Aid . . . 1977.

Don't wed your mother-in-law

Don't quite understand that Massachusetts law that forbids a man from marrying his mother-in-law, do you? And how about the North Carolina law that prohibits anybody there from singing out of tune? Then there's the New York City law that makes it illegal to carry bones into a building without permission. Shrug.

The great failing of most doctors, I believe, is not their sometimes inability to heal, not their general dedication to the dollar, and not their popular mask of superiority. Rather, it's what seems to be their typical conviction that all the rest of us are utterly stupid. I am not stupid, Doctor. You are stupid. Stupid! Stupid! Stupid! But, sir, please help me.

'CURB WEIGHT'

Q. "What's the so-called 'curb weight' of a car?"

A. Its weight with a full tank of gasoline but without passengers.

In the Air Force, the officers outnumber the airplanes by eight to one, remember.

First people to cultivate white potatoes were the Inca Indiand of Peru, it's believed. Spanish explorers took potatoes back to Spain. From there, potatoes went to Italy, then to England and Ireland. This is merely preliminary to a reply to a client's query as to where potatoes were first grown in this country. Most probably, at Londonderry, now Derry, N.H., where Irish immigrants planted them in 1719.

NATURE'S RISKS

Odd how nature assigns her risks to regions, isn't it? I mean you're relatively free of tornadoes in Southern California, but there's ever the threat of earthquakes. Hurricanes don't bother Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, not really, but hail storms there do about as much damage as anything. The Canadian border states are almost as likely to burn to the ground as be buried alive in the winter. High winds and blowing water into the Gulf states make them less than sanctuaries. Likewise the Atlantic Seaboard. Clearly, the only escape from natural violence is Hawaii, where there's nothing to fear but tidal waves and lava.

Case requires medical aid

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read your column about the lady who still had acne at age 30. Mine started at age 14 with pimples and blackheads. I'm a male age 61 and since 30 I have continued to have blackheads. They concentrate around my cheek bones, temple and forehead and each corner of my lower lip. I wash several times a day but it doesn't help.

I have had numerous sebaceous cysts removed from my back and chest.

The worst part is my face smells like swiss cheese even after I wash good. In about five minutes I can rub my face and it has that sebaceous smell. Or if I start to perspire more small lumps show up.

I have had all kinds of vitamins but not for that purpose and the lumps would never disappear.

Is there any help for this? What kind of vitamin A acid should I use? Which antibiotic? Believe me I have often been tempted to try a diluted acid.

DEAR READER — I wanted to include your letter in my column to point out that the problem of overactive sebaceous glands is not restricted to the very young. Many men in particular have trouble such as you describe in some degree a good part of their lives.

The basic problem is the same — overactive sebaceous glands that cause pimples, blackheads and whiteheads. In your case I think you really should go see a dermatologist. The severity and long standing nature of the problem suggests that you will need extra help. Of course I am sending you The Health Letter number 8-2, Acne Can By Treated, to give you more information. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019. This issue will tell you more about peeling agents and what you can and cannot do for yourself.

Please do not try to use a diluted acid for your own face. That could cause you serious problems. Vitamin A acid stings a bit and must also be used according to your doctor's directions. Its action is to cause the surface of the skin to peel off and enable proper drainage of the sebum oil. There are other skin peeling agents that can be used too. I must emphasize again to readers that this is not the same thing as vitamin A that you can take in pill form at all.

I'm not surprised that you have gotten little or no benefit from taking vitamins. There are no vitamins that you take by mouth that really help in this condition unless you already have a significant vitamin deficiency — which is really unlikely.

You will need to use drying agents. You simply cannot wash off blackheads. They are usually below the surface of the skin. And washing won't stop the overproduction of sebum and the odor that has upset you. Your skin specialist can help you on this. A mixture of half water and half ordinary alcohol used to wipe the face very clean several times a day may help to dry things out until you can get to see the dermatologist.

Dr. Lamb answers representative letters of general interest in his column.

Astrographs

By Bernice Bede Osol
For Monday, July 25, 1977
Your Birthday, July 25, 1977

Try not to let others control your thinking on matters important to you this coming year. As long as your deft touch guides the craft, you'll steer to a safe harbor.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You're a take-charge person but you might run into some difficulties today when another tries to force you into a back seat and run the show himself. Find out more about yourself by sending for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter. Mail 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify your birth sign.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Things should go well for you today but you may become disenchanted, and wish you'd taken the other way at the crossroads.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Yours is a gregarious mood today, but you may read more into what people say than they mean and come out swinging.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Make sure you get your due in career situations today. Someone close may try to usurp what's rightfully coming to you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) So long as you stick to plans as you see them, things go according to Hoyle. If you let associates but in, kiss your hopes goodbye.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Skillful methods are necessary today. If you are pushy when you should be accomodating, the outcome won't be so pleasing.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If authority figures treat you as an equal today, you get along well with them. Should they try to emphasize your lesser role, they'll get your dander up.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) What you go after today, you can accomplish if you're left to your own devices. You get balky if others second-guess you.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your temper has a short fuse today, so try to take a philosophical overview before acting. You could speak or act rashly.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) In business matters today, your talents are just so-so. You must guard against acting impulsively. That could tip the scales against you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Where team effort is called for, your counterpart could have far more patience. Your lack of it could derail a good team effort.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You could be involved in a profitable venture today. Unfortunately, you may harbor resentment if you feel your share is too paltry.

Counseling Corner

By R. CLIFF WATERS
Marriage and Family Counselor

"We are completely sexually incompatible!" he stated as soon as both sat down. Ralph and Joli were both 23 and had been married 15 months. They had met at work, dated for almost a year, and then, in love and in complete agreement regarding the type of wedding they wanted, married one weekend in Las Vegas.

Joli sat rigidly, staring angrily at Ralph. Silence hung heavy in the counseling room.

It was clear to me that this husband felt his sexual prowess wasn't thought much of. I was also sure that they would not be sitting across from me unless they still cared for each other and hoped to solve their sexual-communication problems.

Many couples who think they have a sexual problem are really blaming sex for something else that is wrong with their relationship. Frequently, sexual problems are the result of a generally poor relationship between the partners — not necessarily anything wrong sexually. Few couples, for example, can have a very good sexual relationship if they have been fighting about spending money all evening.

I don't believe there is any such thing as complete sexual incompatibility. I have never known a couple who, with just a little effort, did not develop a thoroughly enjoyable compatibility.

Men who are reassured about their prowess tend not only to have a better relationship but to make better adjustment to the diminishing sex drive that accompanies three score years and 10. On the other hand, men subjected to wifely criticism and forever fearful of inviting harsher criticism may, in short order, become as inadequate as their wives contend.

Personal criticism is always bad form. A wife should never comment on the narrowness of her husband's shoulders, or declare that his Adam's apple is too large. And a man should never comment that his wife's breasts are too small, her hips too big or her response too slow. Or anything of the kind.

One of the most important parts of slam bidding is the slam invitation. If you can invite a slam without going past game and then stop at game you are far better off than the man who gets into the twilight zone between game and slam and then winds up down one at a five-heart or five-spade contract.

The ace-king rule comes in mighty handy here. You find yourself with an extra ace or king opposite a partner who is taking you to game. You don't have enough to want to go past game, but you sure want to find a way to tell your partner about slam interest.

South can take the ace of clubs out of his hand and still have a proper one-spade response. So when North jumps to three spades, South shows his slam interest by bidding four clubs. With no slam interest he would just bid four spades.

North likes his hand and proceeds to show his like for it by his four-diamond call. Again, with no slam interest he would simply go to four spades. Now South looks at his three little hearts and decides that he has gone far enough. He does bid four spades.

The bad trump break makes five spades an impossible contract. In fact South must play very carefully to make four.

Ask the Jacobys

Several readers have asked us what we think of the Gerber four-club convention.

We use it as an adjunct to Blackwood, but know that it is inferior when used as your only ace asking bid.

Thoughts

But we exhort you, brethren, to do so more and more, to aspire to live quietly, to mind your own affairs, and to work with your hands, as we charged you; so that you may command the respect of outsiders, and be dependent on nobody. — I Thess. 4,10, 11, 12.

A happy life must be to a great extent a quiet life, for it is only in an atmosphere of quiet that true joy can live. — Bertrand Russell, English philosopher.

DUGOUT DOUG — Gen. Douglas MacArthur, known to GIs of World War II as "Dugout Doug," is portrayed here by actor Gregory Peck in the Universal film, "MacArthur," now playing at selected Southern California theaters.

HAPPY COUPLE — Ron Howard and co-star Nancy Morgan play newlyweds in the film, "Grand Theft Auto," now in general release. Howard wrote the script with his father, actor/writer Rance Howard, and directed and starred in it.

'Grand Theft Auto'

Ron directs first film

LOS ANGELES (AP) — On March 1 of this year, Ron Howard turned 23. On March 2 he began directing his first feature movie, "Grand Theft Auto."

A $600,000 movie is a pretty expensive toy to entrust to a 23-year-old, even one who has been around the movie business for 19 years. But Ron Howard demonstrated the cool competence he displayed in his acting career, from "The Andy Griffith Show" to "Happy Days," and from "Music Man" to "The Shootist."

He makes no pretense about "Grand Theft Auto." It is, says Variety, "the last word in the car crash genre, a nonstop orgy of comic destructiveness... Howard has directed with a broad but amiable and well-disciplined touch in this screwball comedy..."

Howard adds: "I figured if you were going to make a car chase movie, make a car chase movie. Go all out."

He did. "Grand Theft Auto" crashes everything from buses to a Rolls-Royce, making a Demolition Derby seem like visiting day at the old folks home.

"I guess I've thought about directing since I was 8 or 9 years old, without realizing it," said Howard at the cozy laurel Canyon home he shares with his wife Cheryl. "Recently I came across an interview that Time magazine did in connection with 'The Courtship of Eddie's Father.' I was asked what I wanted to be, and I said, 'An actor-writer-producer-director-cameraman.'"

In terms of experience, Ron Howard was ideally suited to pilot a feature movie. He began his career at 4, appearing in "The Journey" with Yul Brynner and Deborah Kerr. He made many TV appearances before landing an eight-year run with Andy Griffith. He played Henry Fonda's son on the briefer "Smith Family" series, has done Disney movies, the near-classic "American Grafitti" as well as the immensely popular "Happy Days."

"I started fooling around with a super-8 camera when I was 15, making movies with my brother Clint and his friends," Howard recalled. He continued through high school and majored in cinema arts at the University of Southern California.

When "Happy Days" was being shot with one camera, movie-style, the executive producer suggested that Ron take a flier at directing. He declined for sound reasons:

"1. My relationship with the others in the cast. I was not established as a leader, and I knew it would be awkward for me to tell Tom Bosley how to play a scene. 2. Jerry Parris was directing most of our shows, and I had advocated a single director for the series.

"3. I had little to gain. Richard Thomas had directed shows on 'The Waltons' and it didn't help him as a director. Even if your work is good, nobody notices much. And if your directing is not so good, it can hurt you when you try to do features.

"Then 'Happy Days' went to a three-camera show with an audience, and that's a whole new ball game. It requires a different set of techniques."

Ron shelved the directing notion until last year when Roger Corman asked him to appear in a car-chase movie, "Eat My Dust." Ron agreed, but he had other things in mind. He and his father, Rance Howard, had written a script. Corman said it was the best he had read in five years — but not the thing for Corman's exploitation-minded New World Pictures.

Lindsey hee haws all way to bank

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Hee Haw" is: 1. Corny. 2. The biggest hit in TV syndication. 3. A barnyard collection of ancient jokes. 4. A serious examination of the mores of modern society.

Well, three out of four ain't bad.

"Hee Haw" is the summer show CBS hurriedly rushed to the air after the Smothers Brothers were fired a few years back. To the network's embarrassment it became a smash hit.

CBS was trying to shed its rural image for more sophisticated comedy, but found it couldn't kill the "Hee Haw" mule with a stick. Finally, it simply kicked it overboard.

The show's producers hocked everything they owned to put the show into syndication. It's now seen by more than 30 million people every weekend on 227 stations.

"I don't see any end to it," said George Lindsey, who joined the show seven years ago as a writer and one of its 35 regular performers. Lindsey, too, was a victim of CBS' turn toward sophistication. He had been Goober for 7½ years, first on "The Andy Griffith Show" and then on "Mayberry RFD," which continued many of the characters.

"You can turn on 'Hee Haw' and it's got something for everybody. It's got singing, jokes and girls. It's like vegetable soup — you're bound to find something in it you like."

"Hee Haw" has been called a barnyard "Laugh-In," which the Nashville-made show is in a way. But the show has long since come into its own, plowing its own way, so to speak. Like "Laugh-In," it has a machinegun pace. And like "Laugh-In," most of its humor seems cribbed from Joe Miller's Joke Book.

Lindsey believes the show, especially in the beginning, has had a lot of closet viewers who watched it but wouldn't admit it. "It's strong in New York. It's strong in all the cities. It's not a hillbilly show. It is a rural show, but funny is funny. In my nightclub act I do some old jokes, but it's how you tell them," he said.

He said the show has been marvelous for his career.

"I came right off 'Mayberry' and went into 'Hee Haw,'" he said. "I think I created a monster with Goober. I haven't been able to work in Hollywood since then.

"I was on the Griffith show for 4½ years and on 'Mayberry' for three years. Loved every minute of it. We were the No. 1 show in the '60s. But I got typecast as Goober. I guess it was because of the popularity of the show and the fact that with the reruns, it's never been off the air."

It is somewhat ironic that he has been typecast as the simple-minded filling station mechanic. The Alabama-born Lindsey is a college graduate, former high school teacher and football coach.

California housing activity 'surpasses' rest of nation

Bank chief notes rise in housing permit total

SAN FRANCISCO — California housing activity has far surpassed the rest of the country for the first five months of the year with total housing permits up 46 per cent over the like period last year, Dr. Raymond Jallow, United California Bank senior vice president and chief economist, said recently.

Speaking before the Fifth Annual Western Secondary Mortgage Market Conference in San Francisco, Jallow said the most dramatic gains in California have taken place in the single, rather than multi-family sector. He added that environmental regulations and shortage of prime building sites will continue to keep housing prices high.

"As far as California savings and loans are concerned, the mortgage interest rate most likely will be moved up to 9½ to 9¾ per cent, keeping a comfortable spread from the relatively high average cost of funds. The buoyant California real estate market should begin 'to settle down,' especially the speculative element," he said.

Jallow went on to say that housing starts in the United States may level off later in 1977 and move to a somewhat lower average pace in 1978. He said nationwide housing starts have averaged more than 30 per cent above their year-ago levels so far this year with an average annual rate exceeding 1.8 million units.

"In the U.S. as a whole, single-family housing starts have averaged about 25 per cent above last year, while multi-family units have shown an average gain of more than 50 per cent," Jallow said. "Nationally, the strongest monthly gains in housing starts currently are taking place in the Northeast and North Central regions. Some easing recently has occured in both the South and West."

On the positive side, the economist listed the following factors that would impact the housing industry for the next 18 months:

—Continued high rates of household formation.

—Further growth in real disposable personal income.

—Only a moderate rise expected in mortgage rates.

—Persistence of the American dream of owning a single-family home.

—The desire of households to upgrade their homes.

—The continuing belief that investment in one's own home can prove to be one of the most sound long-term investments.

Jallow indicated several negative factors will impact housing during the next 18 months. They are:

—Local shortages of certain construction materials are developing, insulation materials already a prime example.

—As commercial and industrial building begins to improve, competition may drive construction wages up and result in more local shortages of certain types of skilled labor.

—Shortage of prime land sites are being reinforced by environmental restrictions and regulations by multiple layers of government.

—A slowing in employment gains and a possible rise in the unemployment rate may act to somewhat dampen buyer confidence.

—Regarding the multi-family sector, the rise in rents still does not appear sufficient to bring about a full revival in that sector.

Jallow added there are other key factors that should curtail the urge to quickly purchase a home before prices rise even further. They are: a large part of the pent-up demand for new housing accumulated during the recession may now already have been witnessed; many other potential first-time buyers will be deterred by the costs of new single-family housing, and a slower rate of appreciation of home prices, or leveling off in some areas, will dampen the demand for housing for strictly investment purposes.

Locally assessed property values rise statewide

SACRAMENTO (AP) — Locally assessed property values climbed 14.2 per cent on statewide average this year — the most in nearly three decades, says William Bennett, chairman of the state Board of Equalization.

Bennett reported Thursday that Kern and Ventura counties led the way with increases of 27.4 and 27.2 per cent, respectively.

He said it was the largest year-to-year percentage increase since fiscal year 1947-48 when it rose 22.8 per cent.

The gross, which for the first time this year excludes timber, is $102.8 billion for the fiscal 1977-78 tax rolls, compared to $90.1 billion for 1976-77, the report said.

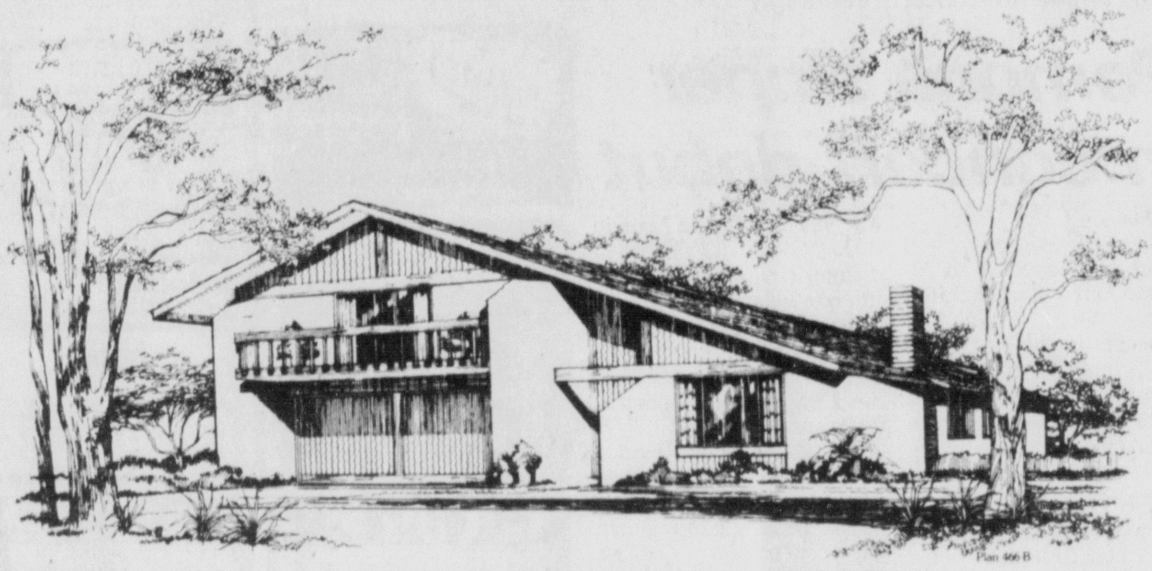

The next-highest increases were in Santa Barbara County, 26.6 per cent, and Sierra County, 26 per cent.

The lowest increases were in Trinity County, 4.7 per cent, and Alpine County, 1.7 per cent.

The locally assessed values, along with privately owned public utilities, which are assessed by the state, form the property tax base.

The seven largest counties, with 1977-78 values and percentage increases: Los Angeles, $30,657,868, 7.6; Orange, $9,927,382, 19.2; San Diego, $7,214,648, 16.3; Santa Clara, $6,510,634, 14.8; San Mateo, $3,832,290, 23.3; San Francisco, $3,575,111, 8.3.

Timber is being taxed, beginning July 1, at the time it is harvested, with proceeds going to local governments to compensate for the revenue they would have otherwise received. The tax bills on most properties will be sent to the owners in November, Bennett said.

COUNTRY MEADOWS—UPLAND

In Upland development

Homes score 'brisk' sales

With Phase I and Phase II of Country Meadows completely sold out and many of its Phase III homes already spoken for, Country Meadows/Upland is maintaining its record of winning a buyer for each home before it's fully completed.

First move-ins of initial buyers are scheduled for August, according to Rudolph Lowy, vice president of Lesny Development Co.

The Country Meadows development centers on Mountain Avenue and 14th Street in Upland. It is reached from the San Bernardino Freeway or Foothill Boulevard by turning north on Mountain to the homes.

Phase III homes are offered in a choice of single-story and two-story stylings, with a variation of exterior motifs giving the buyer still more range of selection.

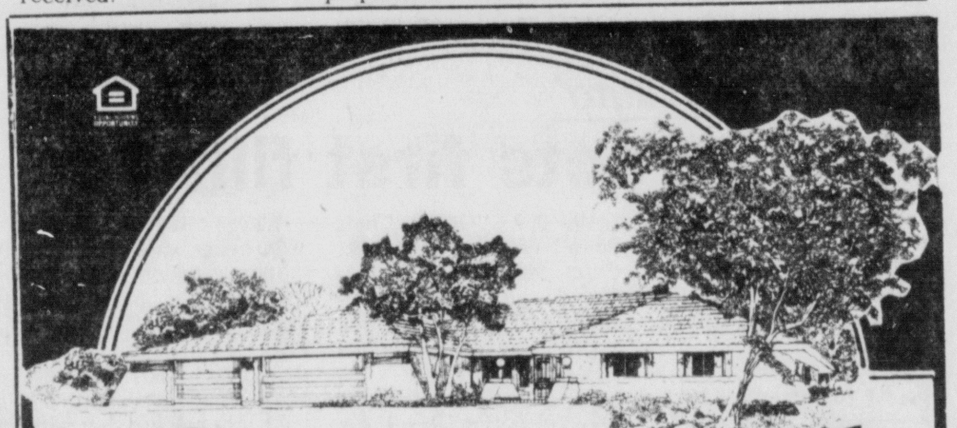

Floor plans available incorporate two or 2½ baths, family rooms, formal dining rooms and inside laundry rooms. One of the plans now available, a single-story model, has 2,117 square feet of livable area, with one of its four bedrooms designed for convertiability to a den or guest room.

The 2,440-square-foot plan of two-story styling features four bedrooms, a guest powder room and a private balcony off the master bedroom.

Purchase price of the two plans ranges from $78,950 to $84,950.

All Country Meadows/Upland homes are equipped with refrigerated air-conditioning. Interior amenities include formal entry floors, sunken living rooms, wet bars, and luminous ceiling kitchens. Master bedroom suites have dressing area and walk-in wardrobes.

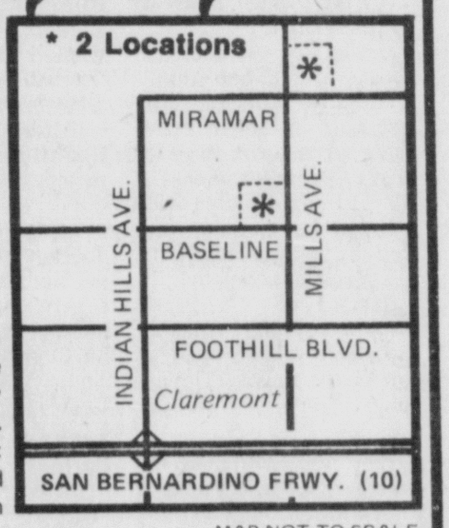

Country Meadows/Upland is open daily until 6 p.m.

Insulation tips for homebuilders

Voluntary guidelines offered

Homebuilders soon will be given voluntary guidelines to tell them how to insulate the walls, ceilings, windows, floors, and doors of any house in any part of the U.S. to save the most energy for the money.

These energy conservation guidelines are being developed by design professionals of the NAHB Research Foundation, Inc., a subsidiary of the National Association of Home Builders, sponsor of the project.

"Our goal is to lower energy demand by 20 per cent for new housing built in America," says Ralph Johnson, NAHB staff vice president and president of the Foundation. "This is a particularly significant saving when you consider that today's typical house, because of tighter construction and more efficient heating/cooling systems, uses about half the energy of its counterpart of 25 years ago."

Art Johnson, director of energy conservation for the Foundation, said guidelines will be based on three factors: the local cost of fuel, the severity of the local climate, and the efficiency of the heating/cooling system to be used in the house. System efficiency, in turn, will be based on the type, size, and location of the furnace, air conditioner, or heat pump.

To determine cost-effectiveness, the Foundation has concluded that any energy-saving investment beyond basic needs should pay for itself within seven years or less. Seven years is the length of time the average American stays in the same home. The study assumes the cost of energy will rise 10 per cent a year and the cost of living will go up 9 per cent a year.

"NAHB's special committee on energy directed the formulation of the guidelines to give homebuilders an accurate new tool for coping with the energy crisis," said Ivan Woolworth, a Long Island builder and co-chairman of the committee. "There have been no definite guidelines in the past."

"While the guidelines now being developed aim to help builders to reduce energy consumption by 20 per cent in new houses," said committee co-chairman Jack Demetree, a Florida builder, "the opportunity for energy savings in older houses lies in the 40-50 per cent range."

Art Johnson counsels owners of older homes to look carefully at their priorities and expenditures in planning energy-saving improvements.

"The first order of business is to plug the holes," he says. "Weatherstrip those cracks around windows and doors. Stop air leaks around ceiling and wall fixtures and outlets. You'll get your money back soon after you do it. If you don't have insulation in your attic, put it in. Although the attic is a critically important spot for insulation, there's a diminishing return past a certain point. If you already have six inches of blown insulation or its equivalent in the attic now, you may be better off buying storm windows.

"Experience also shows you can achieve a good saving for the dollar by insulating heating and cooling ducts in non-conditioned spaces. On the other hand, pumping additional insulation into the walls may be disproportionately expensive for the return you can expect."

Established in 1964, the Research Foundation has become an acknowledged source of expertise in building energy conservation. With a grant from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development, the Foundation has designed a house in Mount Airy, MD, to test over a year's time a wide range of design and construction techniques to provide technical data for the federal government to help update minimum energy conservation standards.

Other clients have included the Federal Energy Administration, the National Bureau of Standards, and the Departments of Labor and Defense. The Foundation also conducts an insulation certification program for manufacturers that covers approximately 75 per cent of the blanket insulation market. Foundation inspectors randomly test producers' products to assure they meet the specifications and performance levels claimed for them.

Consumer confidence wanes

Higher prices, poor quality and the failure of many companies to live up to their advertising claims have consumers worried, reports a recent Harris poll. The survey found that half the consumers feel they get a worse deal in the marketplace than they did ten years ago and 61 per cent say the quality of products and services has gone down. However, consumers feel that product safety will improve and that companies will get better at handling consumers' complaints in the next ten years.

GRANDVIEW SERIES—ALTA LOMA

With rural flavor

Development wins favor

Lewis Homes' new Grandview Series, nestled in an area of Alta Loma rapidly winning buyers' favor because of its rural-like flavor and colorful mountain views, is displaying models of its new Phase II unit.

Completed display models are now being shown. They may be reached from the San Bernardino Freeway by exiting at Vineyard Avenue in Alta Loma. From there the route is north on Vineyard (which becomes Carnelian Street) approximately four miles to 19th Street, then east one block to Beryl and right to the sales office.

Grandview Series homes are designed in one and two-story and split-level designs with up to 2,307 square feet of living space. Their 10,000-square-foot lot sites contribute to the open-space feeling characteristic of this area.

Purchase price is scaled from $68,900 to $88,500.

All homes feature refrigerated air-conditioning, shake roofs, family rooms and woodburning fireplaces. Master bedroom suites incorporate twin-sink pullmans and either mirrored wardrobe doors or walk-in wardrobes.

Various models present such additional refinements as double front doors, wet bars, powder rooms, three-car garages and inside laundry rooms.

Indicative of the Grandview Series' emphasis on fashionable styling is its Plan 440, 3 bedrooms and convertible den or four-bedroom home of 1,918 square feet of living area directing its appeal to families preferring one-story design. Its garden kitchen has a luminous ceiling, a spacious eating bar and an indoor-outdoor serving counter.

A picturesquely sculptured fireplace is set at an angle, hugging two walls of the large family room. A formal dining room, a sunken living room and a master bedroom suite with Mr. and Mrs. wardrobe closets and a dressing area are other highlights of the home.

Shares blame for home-price increases

Duplicating government regulations hit

Unnecessary and often duplicating governmental regulations are partly to blame for sharp increases in the price of new homes over the past six years, a spokesman for the National Association of Home Builders (NAHB) said today.

Testifying before a U.S. Senate Small Business Committee hearing here on the cost of government regulations, John Crosland, Jr., said that because housing costs have increased faster than family income a "whole range of middle income families," particularly young families trying to buy a home for the first time, have been priced out of the market. The median price of new homes actually sold rose from $23,400 in 1970 to $44,200 in 1976. Crosland, a home builder from Charlotte, N.C., is chairman of NAHB's Special Committee on Housing Costs.

Besides periodic shortages of mortgage funds and high interest rates, the other major problem confronting builders who are attempting to hold down costs is the increasing number of regulations imposed to all levels of government, Crosland said.

Regulatory controls, he said, are driving up land and land development costs, increasing the number of costly building code features and increasing overhead costs by requiring builders to pay high governmental fees and to hire additional employees to handle the myriad of paperwork.

"Slow growth and no-growth policies imposed by localities have created artificial shortages of land, thereby driving up the price of raw land," he said. Environmental controls and impact statements also helped push the cost of a typical developed lot from $5,000 in 1970, or 20 per cent of the total sales price of a new home, to 1976's price of about $10,800, or about 26 per cent of the sales price.

A study of land development costs in Montgomery County, Md., showed that environmental requirements increased costs by $2,227 per lot, Crosland testified. In Colorado, another study showed that development costs increased between $1,750 and $3,300 per lot in a five-year period because of increases in water, sewer and permit fees, additional requirements for school and park land dedications and higher construction standards.

Construction delays caused by the regulatory review process also increase a builder's financing and overhead costs, he said. "Once a project is started, the builder is obligated for financing and carrying charges, and every day of processing delay is measurable by the cost of interest charges and increased overhead costs."

"The home building industry has made many significant efforts to attack cost increases through technical improvements and production-line techniques," he said. "But as an industry, there is only so far we can go before bumping into economic and political obstacles imposed by government at all levels."

Anaheim slates appraisal meet

The week of August 1, 1977, has been proclaimed "International Real Estate Appraisal Week" by W.J. Bill Thom, Mayor of Anaheim, in conjunction with the International Appraisal Conference scheduled for the Disneyland Hotel, July 31 through August 3.

The annual conference is sponsored by the international Society of Real Estate Appraisers, the largest independent association of real estate appraisers and analysts in North America. An anticipated 1,500 professional real estate appraisers and analysts are expected to attend. Overall attendance should surpass 3,000.

Scheduled workshop sessions will include discussion on the new dilemma for the appraiser — energy; real estate values as affected by the money market; condemnation blight — a new problem; estimating market response for a proposed residential subdivision; and assessing the impact of land development.

Nationally acclaimed columnist James J. Kilpatrick will be featured Monday morning, August 1. Kilpatrick will address appraisers on the early months of the Carter Administration and comment on current housing policy and economic trends.

A special session will analyze the pilot programs of the Federal National Morgage Association in rehabilitation and secondary market activity in older urban areas.

Guest speakers will include the presidents of the American Institute of Real Estate Counselors, the American Institute of Planners, the Mortgage Bankers Association of America, the American Right' of Way Association and officers of the American Institute of Architects and the U.S. League of Savings Associations.

Registration is open to all interested individuals. Further information may be obtained from the Society of Real Estate Appraisers, 7 South Dearborn, Chicago, IL 60603.

Buying prospects

The newly-elected president of the Mortgage Bankers Association, Kennon Rothchild, predicts a record humber of young people will be home-buying prospects in 1977. Rothchild says the huge demand for single-family houses will be reflected both in the sale of existing as well as new homes.

Upper Westwood sales

Remaining homes limited

Only a limited number of homes remain at Upper Westwood, where two-bedroom, two-bath townhomes are selling for $29,900.

Each home features private patio yards, enclosed private garages, spacious master suites, central air conditioning and plush wall-to-wall carpeting.

Arley Burke, sales manager at Upper Westwood, stresses value and convenience as the two major factors contributing to the development's success.

"We're selling comfortable homes for under $30,000," said Burke. "That's something almost unheard of in today's market. And, in addition to owning their own homes, families are provided with a host of community benefits, including two large swimming pools, a hot pool and a children's play area."

All common expenses, including gardening, will be taken care of by Upper Westwood's homeowner's association for a modest monthly fee.

A furnished model is on display daily at Upper Westwood, which can be reached by taking the San Bernardino Freeway to Indian Hill exit in Claremont. Drive south ¼ mile to San Bernardino Ave., right on San Bernardino two blocks to Appleton, then right to the homes. The model/sales office is located at 1821 Appleton, in Pomona.

"The sales rate we've experienced at Upper Westwood," added Burke, "is certainly one of the quickest I've ever been associated with. That's why there's no doubt in my mind that in a very short while all of the development's townhomes will be completely sold out."

Japanese real estate brokers toured state

Seventeen visiting top-level Japanese real estate brokers, developers, builders and property management experts heard first hand recently about the real estate business and investment opportunities in California, and the state's effort to increase consumer protection and heighten license professionalism, during an all-day conference hosted by the State Department of Real Estate (DRE).

Noting significant differences between California and Japanese real estate law, State Real Estate Department Director David H. Fox stressed that "there are many potential benefits available to Japanese industrial plants in California," and pledged "Departmental assistance in helping Japanese investors to understand all relevant real estate laws and regulations."

Calling DRE "the most advanced agency in real estate administration, not only in the states, but in the world," the 'Japanese Real Estate Study Tour' members received detailed briefings from DRE staff concerning such topics as the examination and licensing process, enforcement of laws through license revocations, suspensions and restrictions, review and approval of newly subdivided property, and real estate education and research activities.

Outlining the department's concern for increased consumer protection, Fox highlighted such departmental goals as "simplification of real estate documents, establishing a uniform code of ethics for all licenses, and sponsoring state-wide home buyer seminars to inform consumers of the basic elements which should be considered in any real estate transaction."

At a luncheon in their honor, Deputy Secretary of the Business and Transportation Agency, Larry Kurmel, commented on California's favorable business climate and outlined the numerous benefits available for Japanese industrial investments in the state.

The Japanese visitors were officially welcomed to California by State Controller Kenneth Cory.

Jerome Blank, president of the California Association of Realtors, gave an overview of the real estate business in California. He emphasized greater opportunities in California for single-family home ownership with financial opportunities, lower downs, etc.

The company sponsoring the current trip, Jutaka-Shimpo-Sha, Inc. (the largest publisher of real estate materials in Japan) hosted a delegation of the 100,000 member realtors association during its visit there last March.

Following the luncheon, the group was given a tour of a Sacramento single-family home tract and a condominium development by William Schoeffler.

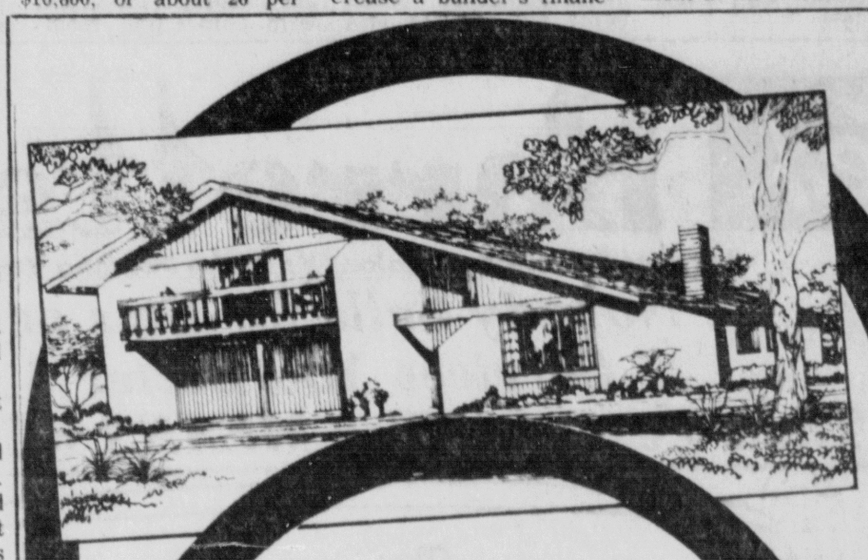

Direct housing aid risks listed

Any attempt to replace virtually all the federally assisted housing programs with some sort of direct housing payment to the poor would be a "tragic social and economic mistake," the National Association of Home Builders said in a letter to President Carter.

The letter, written by NAHB President Robert Arquilla, expressed strong objections to the housing-welfare proposal as reported in the July 14 editions of the Washington Post.

The Post article reported that HEW and OMB officials want to replace the HUD housing programs for low and moderate income families with a direct cash payment that would be included in the Administration's soon to be released welfare reform proposal. It was reported that HUD's annual budget would be cut to 50,000 subsidized units a year. The current level is 400,000 units.

"It would throttle the housing hopes of millions of low and moderate income families," Arquilla wrote. "It would undermine programs underway in thousands of cities and towns to revitalize deteriorated neighborhoods. It would be inefficient and immeasurably more expensive in providing housing opportunities for the poor. It would slow activity not only in the housing industry but the entire economy."

Found in river, fish, storage bins, men's blood

Virginia officials are trying to get rid of 'Kepone' woes

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — The federal government, the state of Virginia and numerous private agencies are still trying to get rid of Kepone — Kepone in the James River, Kepone in the fish, Kepone in storage bins and Kepone in men's blood.

"Unless a miracle occurs, I do not see a permanent, overall solution any time soon," says Gov. Mills Godwin.

Kepone, a toxic gray-white powder used as a poison in ant and roach baits, was developed by Allied Chemical Corp. and manufactured at its plant at Hopewell, Va., from 1966 to 1973.

Production was turned over in 1974 to Life Science Products Co., a firm established in Hopewell by two former Allied employes. Allied furnished the raw materials and bought all the finished product.

Life Science operated until July 1975 when it closed under orders of the Virginia Health Department. The plant was demolished and the site buried under two feet of fresh topsoil.

An examination of 133 former workers at the plant disclosed 76 with Kepone poisoning, 31 serious enough to require hospitalization. Some wives and children also were affected.

Effects included severe tremors, blindness, acute aches and pains, liver damage and sterility. Laboratory tests have shown Kepone can cause cancer.

Some of the former Life Science workers may never be able to hold a job again. Many will never again father children. All wonder if their lives will be cut short by cancer.

It wasn't until late 1975 that tests showed the lower James River heavily contaminated with Kepone. Godwin imposed a ban on the harvest of both finfish and shellfish, a ban which, with only slight modifications, is likely to remain for many years. Recent tests have shown no significant change in the Kepone levels.

Scientists estimate that roughly 100,000 pounds of Kepone found its way into the James after being discharged from the Life Science plant into the Hopewell sewer system.

Kepone's manufacture and use have been banned in this country, but the problem is how to get rid of the stuff manufactured before the ban. More than a million gallons of Kepone sludge is in a storage lagoon in Hopewell; 40,000 pounds in storage tanks at the Portsmouth Naval Base; 900 barrels at Allied's Baltimore plant. Then there's the several hundred drums of contaminated debris from the demolished Life Science plant in Hopewell.

Tests during the winter in Toledo, Ohio, showed the only feasible way go destroy it is to burn it at 2,000 degrees. Virginia has no incinerator capable of this, but plans to build one. That could take two years.

The more difficult problem is how to clean the James River.

William Gilley, executive director of the state's Kepone Task Force, said the Environmental Protection Agency is spending $1 million to study possible alternatives.

The Army Corps of Engineers is conducting tests to determine if dredging of the Kepone-laden sediment is feasible. If it is, the dredging probably will be limited to "hot spots" where the chemical is concentrated. Dredging the entire river bottom for some 60 miles would be too expensive.

Also being studied is the isolation of the hot spots with cofferdams to allow time to heal the river's wounds.

Kepone is a persistent, longlived compound, but studies are under way for methods to enhance its biodegradability — that is, break it down into harmless components.

There are also studies of people exposed to Kepone for better treatment techniques.

Virginia and the federal government are paying the bills. But the state now is negotiating with Allied Chemical Corp. for help in sharing the financial burden.

Allied and Life Science Products were fined a total of more than $17 million in federal court for violating U. S. antipollution laws, the largest such fine ever imposed.

But the Kepone is still out there.

Dodgers extend slump

By BILL LANGLEY
PB Sports Editor

LOS ANGELES — Where is the Great Dodger in the Sky manager Tommy Lasorda constantly refers to?

He certainly isn't in Los Angeles these days as the Dodgers have lost nine of their 12 games, a far cry from the team that stormed through the National League in April and May.

Maybe He is with the Cincinnati Reds, the fading World Champions who don't realize a golden opportunity when they see it. The Reds lost again Saturday afternoon for their fifth consecutive defeat to remain a big 9½ games behind L.A. in the dull excuse for a pennant race.

Or He could be with the improved Montreal Expos, which enjoyed their first sweep ever of the Dodgers in a series with a 6-4 victory Saturday evening.

Normally, a first-place team suffering through a losing streak like the current spell the Dodgers are going through might be a little nervous.

But the Dodgers are nice and relaxed thanks to Cincinnati's inability to gain ground. And the other four teams in the National League West are still so far behind they can't be seen.

So what does Lasorda do about it?

"What can I say to them?" asked the personable Dodger manager. "Is being 9½ games in first place on July 24 bad? If anybody told me that before the season began, I would be jumping for joy.

"This is when the team needs me. They need somebody to put their arm around their shoulder. The easiest thing to do is criticize."

When the team entered the clubhouse after its third straight loss to the Expos, Lasorda said, "I don't want them to hang their heads. I'm proud of them. We're still on top of the mountain. It's just one of those things. I'm grateful Cincinnati hasn't gained an inch on us."

Montreal pitchers looked like Christy Mathewson, Walter Johnson and Cy Young in the three-game series as starter Stan Bahnsen and reliever Joe Kerrigan held the Dodgers to seven hits Saturday.

Yet the Dodgers rallied from a 6-0 deficit to make it interesting for the 42,835 fans on the second night of Helmet Weekend.

Steve Yeager put the Dodgers on the scoreboard in the sixth when he belted his 11th home run of the season.

It looked like L.A. might have a big inning when Bahnsen walked the bases loaded with one out but he got off cheaply enough by getting Ron Cey to ground out with one run scoring and getting some luck when shortstop Chris Speier was able to leap to spear Steve Garvey's liner for the third out.

Cey ripped a two-run single in the eighth to give him 80 RBIs for the season to tie Garvey for the club lead to make it 6-4.

Pinch-hitters Manny Mota and Boog Powell came through with singles in the bottom of the ninth but Kerrigan got Davey Lopes on a called third strike for the final out.

Montreal jumped all over Dodger starter Don Sutton (10-5), who was the hero in Tuesday's All-Star Game.

The Expos took advantage of two walks by Sutton in the second inning with Wayne Garrett clearing the bases with a three-run triple on a ball which got past leftfielder Lee Lacy after he tried for a shoestring catch.

Garrett scored when Bahnsen's bat accidently struck a Sutton pitch for turned out to be a perfect squeeze bunt.

Dave Cash, Ellis Valentine and Tony Perez connected for singles in the fifth for another run and back-to-back hits by Gary Carter, Del Unser and Garrett chased Sutton in the sixth.

Montreal is 45-47 for the season, a giant improvement from last year's 32-60 mark at this point last year.

"It's always great to beat the first-place team three straight," said Montreal manager Dick Williams. "The Dodgers are ready to explode on somebody. I'm glad it wasn't us."

DODGER DATA — The New York Mets come into Dodger Stadium this afternoon for a brief two-game series. Tommy John (10-4) will go against Nini Espinosa (5-7) in today's 1 p.m. wind-up of Helmet Weekend. Doug Rau (11-1) and Craig Swan (5-6) are the probables Monday night.

Lefthander Lance Rautzhan made his major league debut for the Dodgers in relieving for Sutton. He worked two innings, allowing one hit, one walk and no runs.

The Montreal pitching staff leads the N.L. in complete games with 22.

Billy Martin feels insecure

NEW YORK (AP) — Billy Martin, whose job as Yankee manager is again rumored to be in jeopardy, said Saturday that those rumors are not exaggerated.

"I believe the rumor is pretty strong," Martin said after the Yankees' 3-1 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers. "I believe I have something to worry about. I hope I'm still talking to you a month from now."

Martin, whose team has not played up to its apparent capabilities on the field this season and has been wracked by dissension off it, held a closeddoor meeting with the Yankees after Saturday's game.

After the doors were open to reporters, the players were completely united behind their beleagured field boss.

Reggie Jackson, Martin's sometime adversary, was one of the first to throw his support behind Martin.

"You couldn't ask for a better guy," said Jackson, who has fought publicly with Martin on and off all season. "He doesn't check you, doesn't bother you, lets you do what you want. We should come to his aid nine innings a day. We don't have to be a friend, but we owe him that much.

"It's a shame, the kind of ballclub we have. If we played the way we can for three weeks, that's all it would take to blow open the American League East race. Him and I have been in and out, but he wants to win. I'm saying he wants to win. There should be more unity here; it's on our shoulders. Some days, there is so much going on, the leaders can't even assert themselves. We've played ragged for 90some games and everybody wants to know what and where the Yankees are going. I said we are still the favorites."

Affirmed captures Juvenile

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Affirmed, the solid favorite, scored easily in the first division of the rich Hollywood Juvenile Championship and Noble Bronze captured the second division at Hollywood Park Saturday.

In the feature for 2-year-olds, Affirmed, with Laffit Pincay aboard, finished seven lengths in front of He's Dewan, with Esops Foibles third in the field of eight in the $104,100 first division.

Noble Bronze, with Sandy Hawley up, won by 2½ lengths over Little Reb, with Tally Ho the Fox third in the $105,350 second division with 10 horses competing. Favored B.W. Turner ran out of the money.

The time for six furlongs in the first race was 1:09 1-5 and in the second it was 1:09 4-5.

The colts weighed 122 pounds except for two in each division, who were non-winners. They carried 117 pounds.

Affirmed, winner of the recent Youthful Stakes at Belmont Park, returned $2.80, $2.40 and $2.20. He's Dewan paid $3.40 and $3, and Esops Foibles returned $3.20.

The victory was worth $60,975 to the Harbor View Farm of Jacksonville, Fla.

Tampoy, the second favorite in the first section, acted up in the gate, unseated jockey Frank Olivares and eventually was scratched from the race.

Noble Bronze paid $9.40, $5 and $3.80. Little Reb returned $6 and $4.40, and Tally Ho the Fox paid $6.

Noble Bronze, a maiden in three starts, collected $62,225 for his owner, William Breliant of Beverly Hills, Calif. Noble Bronze was bred by his owner in Kenucky, while Affirmed was bred by his stable in Florida.

B.W. Turner, from the Fred W. Hooper stable of Florida, winner of his two starts, including the Cabrillo Stakes July 8, never was a factor and finished sixth.

Trevino builds large lead

OAKVILLE, Ont. (AP) — "I never dreamed," Lee Trevino said with a broad grin, "that I could shoot a 71 and have a six-stroke lead.

"Neither did anybody else."

But his one-under-par effort, coupled with a whipping wind that destroyed the hopes of Jack Nicklaus and other would-be challengers, staked Trevino to a commanding lead Saturday in the third round of the $225,000 Canadian Open Golf Tournament.

"Let's just say I have an excellent chance of winning," said Trevino, the frontrunner throughout the tourney. "I think I can win.

"I'm not gonna play it safe. You can't play it safe on this golf course," Trevino said. "If I lose it, I'm gonna lose it trying to win. I don't want to give it to somebody. Somebody is gonna have to come and get it."

And it can be done, said Nicklaus, a runner-up in his last two starts and four times the No. 2 finisher in this tournament. He is tied for second going into Sunday's final round.

"I don't care who it is, Trevino or anybody, anyone can be caught from six shots back."

Trevino, on the rebound from back surgery and gunning for his first victory in more than a year, put together a 54-hole total of 206, 10 under par on the 7,090-yard Glen Abbey Golf Club course.

Jack Nicklaus, the man who designed the hilly layout that is scheduled to be a permanent home for the Canadian National Championship, had his creation snap back at him in the gusty, swirling winds.

Nicklaus, three strokes back when the day's play started, could do no better than a twoover-par 74 and was tied for second at 212 with Ray Floyd and Tom Kite. Kite had to finish birdie-birdie for a 74, and Floyd shot a 73.

Tom Weiskopf, Mike Morley, George Cadle and England's Peter Oosterhuis were next at 214, a distant eight strokes back with 18 holes to go in the chase for a $45,000 first prize. Morley had a third round 69, Weiskopf 70, Oosterhuis 72 and Cadle, playing with Trevino and Nicklaus in the last threesome, shot 74.

Arnold Palmer struggled to an 81 and said he would not compete in Sunday's final round.

Trevino, who required only 26 putts in each of the first two rounds, needed 30 strokes on the fast, rolling greens this windy day, but he hit the ball from the fairway with much more authority and crispness.

"I played much better tee to green than the first two days," he said.

"Again, I was quite lucky," said the brash and brassy Trevino, who sandwiched this national championship between victories in the U.S. and British Opens in 1971.

"The good Lord is on my side this week. It seems that every time I hit a bad shot, I hit a good one to make up for it."

While Nicklaus, his closest challenger, was struggling on the front side, Trevino made his biggest move.

He bogeyed the second hole after driving in a fairway bunker, but birdied the next three in a row, stroking a five-iron four feet from the flag on the third and running in 20-and 15-foot putts on the next two.

Nicklaus never got closer than four strokes again.

Both Nicklaus and Trevino bogeyed the eighth, Nicklaus birdied the 13th from about 18 feet and Trevino bogeyed the 16th, missing the green after misunderstanding his caddy's instructions on the yardage.

"I asked him for the distance to the cut of the green and he said 185. After I hit it over the green, I asked him again and he said it was 170 to the front of the green and 185 to the pin."

That cut the margin to four strokes, but Nicklaus bogeyed the 17th from a bunker and Trevino birdied the 18th, rolling in a 20-footer that he saluted with a jaunty wave of the putter.

"Six strokes may be too much," he said. "Sometimes a big lead is harder to hold than a little one. It puts more pressure on you.

"This is the kind of golf course you can make up six shots on. If the leader plays the front nine three over and somebody else plays it three under— the lead is gone.

"It all depends on how I play the front nine Sunday. If I can get around about one under, I should be able to hang on."

Pete Rose wants to shatter Musial's NL career hit record

CINCINNATI (AP) — Hit hungry Pete Rose, on the verge of passing Frank Frisch as baseball's greatest switch-hitter, is getting close enough to taste Stan Musial's National League record for career hits.

"That motivates me, keeps me going," said the 36-year-old, strong-willed captain of the Cincinnati Reds.

"I can beat Musial's record if I stay healthy. The next two years — 1978 and 1979 — will be the key. If I can get close to 200 hits both years, I can do it," said Rose, a durable performer who has appeared in almost 600 consecutive games.

Musial, the St. Louis Cardinals' hitting machine, had 3,630 hits during his 22-year National League career. Legendary Ty Cobb owns the all-time hit mark of 4,191.

Rose's relentless 14-year pursuit of the record-makers has left milestones tumbling like ten-pins.

The three-time batting champion entered the weekend six hits shy of breaking Frisch's career total.

The three-time batting champion had three hits against Pittsburgh Saturday, tying Frisch with 2,880 career hits. Frisch did it in 19 years.

Rose, who can break the tie Sunday against the St. Louis Cardinals, said he expects his record to stand for decades.

"I don't see any switch hitters overtaking me," said Rose.

He recently passed Babe Ruth on the hit parade list, will eclipse Mel Ott in the next few days and plans to reach the prestigious 3,000 hit club early next spring. Only a dozen players have topped the mark.

He figures the 3,000-hit level will assure him of a spot in the Hall of Fame. "I've always had the will to win and the incentive to do my best, but you need little things to drive you," said Rose, who is bidding to tie Cobb's major league mark of nine 200-hit seasons.

"I know one thing. I'll have the most hits in baseball for the years I played. Roberto Clemente finished with 3,000 in 18 years. I'll have 3,000 in 15 years and one month. I'd be on my 10th 200-hit season right now if it wasn't for the strike of 1972. I finished with 198 that year, when the strike shortened the season by eight games."

Consistency has been his byword. Ever-present among the league's top 10 hitters, Rose is attempting to hit over .300 for the 12th time in 13 years for a career average of .311.

"I'm proudest of the fact that I've averaged 198 hits per season."

And he takes pride in his switch hitting, applying himself to the art since age nine. "My uncle, who later signed me to a Reds contract, convinced my dad that switch hitter was a big advantage. He didn't enjoy his greatest success until he turned to switch hitting at age 30. I don't think they ever thought it would lead to this," he said softly.

Rams settle with top choice

FULLERTON, Calif. (AP) — The Los Angeles Rams have agreed to a series of one-year contracts with their top draft choice, Bob Brudzinski, the National Football League club announced Saturday.

Brudzinski, a linebacker who played defensive end at Ohio State, has been absent from the Rams' training camp at California State University. But he was expected to report Sunday.

Delay, triple play don't help Angels

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — Lyman Bostock capped a five-run fourth inning with a two-run homer, and three other Twins also homered as Minnesota ripped California 10-4 Saturday in a game that featured a triple play and a twohour, 14-minute rain delay.

Bostock's blast came off loser Mike Barlow, 0-1, and gave the Twins a 5-2 lead. California starter Frank Tanana was touched for two runs in the first inning and did not return after the rain delay following the inning.

Along with his big hit, Bostock had the distinction of lining into a triple play in the sixth inning.

Minnesota also got solo homers from Rod Carew, Roy Smalley and Larry Hisle in an 11-hit assault against five California pitchers. Carew's was his seventh, Smalley's his fourth and Hisle's his 22nd.

Pete Redfern, 3-5, gained the victory for the Twins, his first since May 31. He pitched six innings, allowing three California runs before Tom Johnson came in to pitch the seventh.

After Smalley homered leading off the Twins' sixth, Jerry Terrell singled and Mike Cubbage reached on left fielder Don Baylor's error, putting runners at first and second.

Bostock then hit a 3-2 pitch from reliever Tom Walker with the runners moving, lining a shot to shortstop Rance Mulliniks, who stepped on second and threw to first, completing the triple play.

Bostock greeted Tanana by beating out a bunt for a hit on the game's first pitch. He scored from first on a double by Dan Ford, who eventually came home on a sacrifice fly by Carew.

Bobby Bonds, who drove in seven runs in the three-game series, knocked in Rance Mulliniks, who had singled with two outs in the third, and Tony Solaita tied the game at 2-2 with a single to score Bonds.

The Twins broke the game open in the fourth, scoring five runs off Barlow. After Hisle was hit by a pitch and advanced to third on a bunt single by Craig Kusick and a throwing error by Barlow, consecutive run-scoring singles by Butch Wynegar and Smalley gave Minnesota a 4-2 advantage.

Pinch-hitter Rich Chiles made it 5-2 with a ground out, scoring Wynegar, and Bostock's home run gave the Twins an insurmountable 7-2 cushion.

California picked up single runs in the fifth, on a sacrifice fly by Bonds, and in the eighth on an RBI single by Mulliniks.

Baseball players worship together

By BRENT SHYER
PB Correspondent

Most baseball players who want to be successful realize the importance of playing by the book, but now an even greater number are beginning to live by the Book.

A strong Baseball Chapel program is now in its fifth season of delivering Sunday services at Major League ball parks.

Watson Spoelstra, a retired Detroit News sportswriter, founded the program in 1973. His responsibility is to speak to nine teams or find other speakers to conduct the Chapel prior to game time on Sundays.

John Werhas, the Baseball Chapel Inc. West Coast area representative, handles the duties of speaking to the Dodgers and Angels, but he also invites "speakers, laymen, pastors, or just men that have the ability to share their faith" to talk to players.

Werhas explained the need for a program of this nature by saying, "Some guys (players) wouldn't come to a normal church situation — a lot of them see a lot of hypocrisy and some things they don't want to hear about. Also, the time of afternoon games prevents them from going to a church.

"Now they can sit in the equipment room or clubhouse in a relaxed atmosphere, while they put their uniforms on, and hear about Jesus Christ and the teachings of the Bible."

The weekly attendance in the Baseball Chapel program has been booming this year, with the average close to 390. Managers, coaches, and other team personnel are allowed to join the services, but primarily the meetings are for the players.

Every major league team has two Chapel leaders who organize the services and encourage players to attend

The Dodgers' representatives are pitcher Don Sutton and outfielder Dusty Baker. Bobby Bonds and Dave Chalk are the player leaders for the Angels.

"Tommy Lasorda has been a tremendous help to me," said Werhas, who volunteers his time to the Chapel program. "He has opened his doors to us, and is positive about anything we do in there.

"I'd say that about 90 per cent of the managers are very positive about what we do. Of course San Diego's Alvin Dark is about the finest Christian athlete I've ever met. About 30 to 40 per cent of the managers attend meetings, but those who don't put full approval on it."

Other notable Chapel leaders from various clubs include Cincinnati's George Foster, Houston's J.R. Richard, Montreal's Gary Carter and Dave Cash, San Diego's Dave Winfield, Toronto's Bill Singer, Milwaukee's Sal Bando, and New York Yankees' Catfish Hunter.

Now the term "team togetherness" can be used in more ways than one around a baseball diamond.

Trevino fights weight gain

OAKVILLE, Ont. (AP) — At 37, Lee Trevino has at least one problem associated with middle age—the battle of the bulge.

"I gain weight so easily, I only eat one meal a day," said Trevino, the leader at the halfway mark of the Canadian Open golf championship. "I have breakfast and then eat only fruit the rest of the day."

But his breakfast is no ordinary one.

"I have orange juice, cereal, toast, two eggs, potatoes and steak," said the 5-foot-7, 180-pound Trevino.

Computer picks Carew

NEW YORK (AP) — Rod Carew, batting .387 going into this weekend, has taken over the lead in the computer competition which rates major league baseball players' productivity.

Carew, the Minnesota Twins' first baseman, had a Productive Efficiency Rating of 77.24 as of last week's All-Star break. Next come two California Angels pitchers, Frank Tanana at 76.06 and Nolan Ryan at 74.77, followed by Chicago Cubs reliever Bruce Sutter, 73.99.

The system, which attempts to rate all players on the basis of their output whether they are hitters or pitchers, is sponsored by Seagram's Seven Crowns of Sports.

Forego second in handicap

NEW YORK (AP) — Great Contractor shot inside of Forego and Co Host with a little more than a quarter-mile left and went on to win the $111,000 Brooklyn Handicap Saturday at Belmont Park.

Forego, a three-time Horse of the Year owned by Martha Gerry was spotting from 22 to 30 pounds to 12 rivals. He finished a distant second in losing his second straight race. However, the $24,420 second money made Forego only the second thoroughbred ever to win at least $1.8 million. His bankroll now is $1,818,935.

The 1½-mile race was unusual in that Forego, topweighted at 137 pounds, went for the lead with about a mile left. The big 7-year-old gelding's usual style is to lay off the pace, then make a big run on the turn.

Oh knocks in winning run

FUKUOKA, Japan (AP) — Sadaharu Oh drove in the winning run with a sacrifice fly to help the Central League AllStars to a 2-1 victory over the Pacific League in the first game of Japan's three-game All-Star series.

After six scoreless innings, the Central Leaguers got both their runs in the top of the seventh. Hal Breeden, formerly of the Montreal Expos, was hit by a pitch, moved to third on a single by Tustomu Wakamatsu and scored on a wild pitch by Mitsuo Inaba. Oh made it 2-0 with a sacrifice fly later in the inning.

Yoshiharu Wakima homered in the bottom of the seventh for the Pacific League's only run.

Pomona American Seniors sweep

By BRENT SHYER
PB Correspondent

A team that showed up Saturday morning at La Verne College had no desire to play two games, but had a strong desire to win the first one and call it a day.

Pomona American, which was that squad, took the District 20 Senior Division Tournament title with a 7-3 victory over Diamond Bar.

American, with its new crown, has won three championships in Senior Division play in the last four seasons. It took first in 1974, '76, and '77.

Ray Tolentino pitched the distance for American, as he struck out five batters and allowed only one earned run.

American won five straight contests to claim the title. Obviously, it was the only undefeated team left in the tourney. American beat La Verne, 6-2, Diamond Bar twice, 2-0, 7-3, Ted Greene, 6-2, and Glendora-South Hills, 7-0.

American manager Ted Kolb said about the game, "We played as a team today — everybody went out and did a job. We didn't want to play two games today, because it's just too warm."

American, the visiting team, scored in the first inning, when Vince Cabrera and Richard Yett singled to put runners at first and second.

After a pop out, a fielder's choice put Loyd Falgout at first and Cabrera at third. Carey Shephard walked and as the ball ticked off the catcher's mitt, Cabrera scored.

Diamond Bar tied the game in the second. With two out, Bob Jastrab reached base on an error, advanced to third on Jon Vallejo's single, and scored on the rightfielder's miscue.

American added a pair of runs in the third. Shephard got a base hit to left and advanced to second on an error. Gabriel Rodriguez singled to left as Shephard went to third. Shephard scored on a bunt by Ricky Murillo — and when the ball was thrown wildly, another run came across.

Tom Davis' sacrifice fly in the last of the third for D.B. made the score 3-2.

American's Bill Eldridge and Murillo picked up RBIs in the fifth, and Murillo and Yett brought in two more runs in the seventh to complete the scoring.

Pomona American now advances to Sectional play on Monday, as it will take on the District 19 winner from Azusa at Stevens Field in Diamond Bar at 5:30 p.m.

Don Green named A.D.

Former Pomonan Don Green has been appointed athletic director at Cal Lutheran College in Thousand Oaks.

Green, assistant professor in physical education and head track coach for the Kingsmen as well as assistant football coach, is chairman of the physical education department and served as acting director of athletics last spring.

Green was head track coach and head football coach at Pomona High from 1958 to 1970 and also served as athletic director and chairman of the physical education department.

At Pomona, his football teams won eight league championships and his track teams took 18 league titles.

A graduate of Monmouth College, Green earned his Master's degree from USC. A veteran of the Marine Corps, Green retired as a major.

Mexico's best eyes 'Series'

By PHIL ROCHE
PB Staff Writer

Ernesto Perez Acosta, the first golf pro to represent Mexico in the World Series of Golf, says he's "going to win the World Series."

Acosta is preparing for the tournament which will be held Sept. 2-5 at Firestone C.C., Akron, Ohio by playing these days in Europe and Japan.

The 31-year-old Acosta already has shown the world the kind of golf he can play. He won individual honors in the World Cup tournament last December in Palm Springs.

Dave Stockton, who with Jerry Pate formed the U.S. team, remembers Acosta. "From the beginning of the week, Ernesto was a poular guy. He's like Trevino, happy and chipper. And he told everyone he was going to win.

"He made good that promise," Stockton says. "And now, if he's saying that about the World Series — well, somebody better listen."

The 5-9, 165 pounder turned pro in 1970 and has been one of Mexico's leading players, winning 34 tournaments. He is the only player ever to win the Mexico Open twice.

He started golf when he was 7, at the same time he started as a caddie at a club near his home. An older brother was an assistant pro at the club.

"One of my brothers, David, is a professional in Guadalajara," Ernesto says, "and when I'm having trouble with my game, I go to him. He quickly tells me what I'm doing wrong."

Acosta knows that Jack Nicklaus won the World Series in 1976 with a 275 total. "That's a good score," he says. "I expect to win it this year."

FUTURE CHAMP — Kelly Hanak of Glendale, Ariz. wears a big cap as his handicap in under-10 age competition of Junior World Golf Tournament in San Diego. Seven hundred boys and girls participated in the event.

There is a lot more at stake at the 1977 PGA Championship Aug. 10-14 at Pebble Beach than the $45,000 top prize. For most of the players a PGA title would mean a rare "triple play" — a major title, a berth on the Ryder Cup team, and a spot in the World Series of Golf.

Most experts agree that the PGA Championship has the strongest field of any golf tournament in the world. The contestants include the top 70 pros on the 1977 PGA Tour money list, the 15 low scorers from the 1976 PGA tournament, the low 25 scorers from the 1976 Club Pros Championship, and the champions of each of the 39 PGA sections.

A special highlight on Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 9, at Pebble Beach will be the finals of the national long-driving contest. The contest will be televised by ABC Sunday afternoon, Aug. 14.

Qualifying rounds for the 3rd annual Silver Circle Senior Women's championship begin throughout Southern California this week and will continue through Sept. 2.

Sponsored by Home Savings and Loan Association, the tournament has already become the nation's largest women's amateur golf event. Last year more than 8,000 women participated in the tournament.

Women golfers wishing information about the event can obtain it by contacting their club tournament director or by calling Silver Circle coordinator Anne Miller at 213-994-0793.

The San Bernardino County tournament has been scheduled for Saturday and Sunday, Aug. 13-14 over two fine courses. Players in the county will take on El Rancho Verde in Rialto one day and San Bernardino Golf Course the next.

Jerry McGee's observations on the World Series of Golf:

"It has to be the toughest tournament in the world to qualify for. But it must be one of the easiest in the world to win. After all, last year it was won by a church league basketball player from Florida."

Jack Nicklaus plays church league basketball.

It hasn't been announced yet, but the Philadelphia Classic will follow the British Open next year and will be given "designated tournament" status, which requires all leading players to compete.

"I can see both sides of the argument" about the designated tournament concept, Nicklaus said.

"With the British Open falling as it does on the schedule, it cuts into the American tour. Commissioner Deane Beman is using the designated tournament to get the players back from Britain immediately, get them back to playing in the United States.

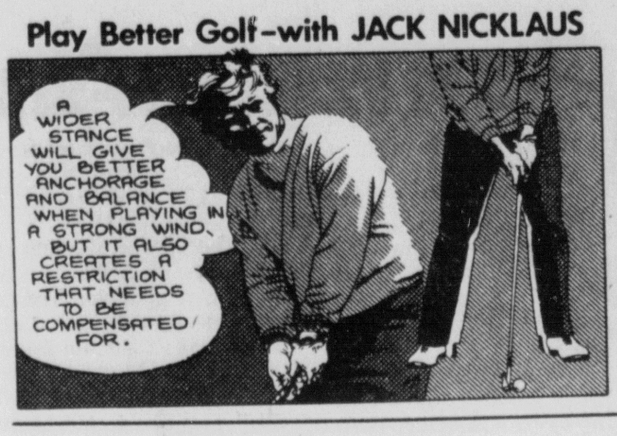

"That's good for our tour. That's what he's supposed to do, what he's paid to do, work for the good of our tour.

"On the other hand, I don't like to play the week immediately following a major championship and there are a lot of other fellows who don't like to play. We're forced into playing a tournament when we're on a let-down."

Nicklaus' schedule calls for him to play at least seven more events this year: the Canadian Open, PGAA, Westchester, Kings Island, World Series, Ryder Cup and the Austrailian Open.

"I may add one more," he said.

Movie Review

'One on One' misses mark

An AP Sports Movie Review

"Militarism is basically authoritarian and so is college athletics," declares the bearded psychology professor, a vestige of the '60s. "Both sanction violence. Both are anti-intellectual."

"Maybe college sports the way they run it is garbage," concedes the young idealist, a student-athlete cut from the squeaky-clean, Frank Merriwell mold. "But playing sports is beautiful."

Those viewpoints are from the rather strained dialogue of the movie "One On One," which Warner Bros. describes as "a love story" involving "a young man who is faced with the awesome realities of the college sports system. It is contemporary, energetic and controversial."

Maybe so, but unfortunately that brief verbal confrontation is as close as the film comes to dealing with the problems of big-time school sports.

"One On One," which is in national distribution this summer and has already opened in many areas, is an entertaining love story, a film whose cumbersome dialogue and implausible plot development are largely overcome by two winning lead actors, Robby Benson and Annette O'Toole.

But a probe of the "awesome realities of the sports system," it most definitely is not.

That should be no surprise. It is much simpler to do a standard boy-girl love story than an in-depth examination of the evils caused by the high-pressure system of college athletics as practiced at this country's major institutions. More to the point, a love story has a vastly greater potential audience—and movies, after all, are made to make money.

The boy is a freshman college basektball player, Henry Steele, an innocent from the country plunked down in the wilds of a big city, a high school star who finds himself just one of the crowd at a large Los Angeles university. The girl, Janet Hays, is a senior psychology student hired as a tutor by the athletic department. At first she regards Steele as just another of the athletic department's "animals," but she is soon won over by his innocence and sincerity.

At this point in the film, written by Benson and his father, Jerry Segal, and directed by Lamont Johnson, a key shift is made.

We have already seen the lavish treatment an athlete receives while he is being recruited—the fancy dinners, the car for a graduation present, the big money to be made from cushy jobs and selling free tickets to obliging alumni at $300 apiece. We've also seen the problems of adjustment he faces when, as a college freshman, he suddenly finds himself a small fish in a vast pond. But instead of delving into the causes and effects of these conditions, the film backs off to the more familiar—and audience pleasing—ground of the love story.

The heavy in the film is the college basketball coach, played by G.D. Spradlin. Coach Moreland Smith is a Bobby Knight-type taken to a most rigid, authoritarian and unrealistic extreme.

Steele has troubles adjusting to college, troubles which are complicated by his budding love affair, and aggravated by Coach Smith's unbending system. Coach and player are quickly at odds, and what ensues is a one-on-one confrontation: The coach tries to bust the player off the team, the player—in "Rocky" fashion—refuses to quit and vows to go the distance.

There are crisply cut scenes of Steele working himself into top condition, again as in "Rocky." There is a climactic action sequence in which all of Steele's hard work pays off, followed by a resolution of the confrontation between coach and player.

Viewed as a simple love story, "One On One" is an entertaining couple of hours. Benson and O'Toole are pleasing, and the basketball action shots are particularly well done.

Johnson, the director, is more precise in describing "One On One."

"The film is a deliberately romantic, idealistic hero story," he said. "It is really about a young man who finally discovers what choices he has to make to become his own man."

Pro golfers may see cutback of foreign tours

OAKVILLE, Ont. (AP) — When America's leading professional golfers presented their green passports at Prestwick Airport, coming back from the British Open, they were filled with official stamps overlaying visas on top of entry permits.

For the top level American pros, their international travel documents are as familiar, as necessary and as much a part of their equipment as a favorite wedge.

They're internationalists. American tour members won 18 foreign events in 1976, including the Australian Open (Jack Nicklaus), the Irish Open (Ben Crenshaw) and the Pacific Masters (Jerry Pate).

Many of the top players have commercial contracts which require them to play in certain foreign events. Often, these are highly lucrative affairs. One player received more than $100,000 — a guaranteed figure — for appearance in two foreign tournaments early this year.

Others receive guarantees of about $5,000 per tournament, plus all expenses, plus anything they win in prize money. Many players compete heavily, on several trips a year, in Europe and Australia, and particularly in golf-mad Japan.

But that phenomenon may end.

PGA Tour Commissioner Deane Beman, in an open letter to tour players, calls the foreign travel, necessitating the absence of leading players from American tour events, "the most critical crisis since the formulation (of the Tour's) independent status in 1969."

And he is seeking legislation "which will severely limit" the number of foreign events tour members may play.

"We have always faced the problem of (tour) members requesting releases for conflicting events, but never before has it reached the epidemic proportions of 1977. And, as a result, I have had to deny the release of many players who wish to play elsewhere," Beman said in a statement distributed to players in the "PGA Tour News," a house publication of tour headquarters in Washington.

The problem is a simple one and, generally, it involves only the top players, the gate attractions, the glamour names. They're the ones sought by foreign event organizers. If they compete in those foreign tournaments, they're often doing it at the expense of an American tournament. And it's the same players the American tournament sponsor wants in his field, the names that will draw the galleries through the gates.

"How would you feel," Beman asked the players "if you were a sponsor who had agreed to put anywhere from $200,000 to $300,000 in prize money and provided the potential participants with every possible convenience — including free baby-sitting services and instant pick-up and delivery to the place of your choice — and then you were deluged with requests from players to compete somewhere else the week of your event?"

Beman now has the means to prohibit tour players from competing in foreign events that conflict with American tour tournaments. And he warns he's going to make greater use of that power.

"Believe me," he said, "I know how appealing it is to travel abroad and perhaps take your family on an unusual vacation. But enough is enough."

Players wishing to compete in a tournament (with the exception of the British Open) that is in conflict with an American tour event, must both from the commissioner and the sponsor of the American tournament.

"It might help if I give you my interpretation of what the tournament regulations say in that regard," Beman said.

"As a member of the PGA Tour, you are not obligated to play in any specific event with the exception of a designated tournament. But you are obligated not to play elsewhere. If you play in a foreign event instead of taking a week off, the result is that you skipped one of our events. Saying to the sponsor, 'I wasn't going to play there anyway,' might be true. But it is likely that if you obtain a release for a week then, that you will not add one more week to your schedule and so some other tour sponsor, later in the season, will have a weaker field.

"I feel strongly that being released to play elsewhere is a privilege and not a right."

While Beman has the power to limit foreign play by American tour players, he will ask the tournament policy board to approve regulations "which will severely limit" the number of events from which a player may be released in a year, the number of players to be released from a specific event and releases from the same event in consecutive years.

"You always have the right to play all over the world but you cannot take advantage of the PGA Tour's attractive tournament schedule, picking and choosing where it best suits you, and then travel around the world armed with the reputation that our tournament sponsors have helped make possible for you to earn," Beman told the players.

"You can't have it both ways."

Lovely to look at and easy to wear

By DANIELA PETROFF
AP Fashion Writer

ROME (AP) — The sultan pleased his harem again Thursday night when Valentino, the sheik of sheiks in the Italian high fashion emirate, showed his fall-winter collection.

His new clothes are lovely to look at and easy to wear, feminine and practical from the early morning through the darker hours of a winter night.

The daytime look suits both the country and city woman. Cashmere wool ensembles — a loosely pleated skirt and blouse pullover tucked at the hip in 1920s flapper style, in loden green and woodsy brown plaids — will look good both on the sidewalks of Fifth Avenue and in the hills of Vermont alike.

Midcalf blanket capes fold cozily around the body, to keep you warm wherever you might be on a cold winter night.

For the dusky hours, Valentino takes us back to the turn of the century, when propriety was the discreet fashion rule. High collars with timid ruffles and wide sleeves ending in a tight ruffled cuff in printed gray floral chiffon ensembles remind one of the Gibson girls, in their proper elegance.

Black velvet cocktail dresses with Granny-lace Pilgrim collars, and smocking stitch on the bodice of simple lined evening gowns bring back memories of the well-dressed little guest at the birthday party.

But evening is the time for romantic fantasy, Valentino's favorite realm, and his fall-winter collection, although never extravagant, is a purely feminine dream world. Whether the style is chiffon plisse with veils and bat-wing sleeves for the ethereal look, silk taffeta large floral prints copied from tapestry designs for the receiving-line look, or baby pink taffeta with a tender floral print on the hem and embossed sleeve for the ingenue look, the Valentino cry is, "Woman, enjoy your femininity."

Judging from the enthusiastic applause at the end of the show, the collection struck a sympathetic note in the fashion-loving audience.

Joyce Brothers

The vacation habit

DEAR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS: Neither my husband nor I really want to go away on vacation this year but we kid each other by pretending that we do. I guess we think there's something wrong with us if we don't, so every year we buy tons of film and take off. What stops us from admitting we'd rather stay home is that we're both afraid of missing something. It's become a habit we can't break. — W.T.

Dear W.T. — Vacations with one activity following another and no time in between for reflecting, assimilating the day's sights, or truly relaxing are a pattern for many Americans. It's almost as if we've forgotten that it's possible to have a wonderful vacation without ever leaving the home front.

A genuine vacation should include breaking patterns, even patterns of constant motion. Vacation can be a time for quiet reading and reflection, a chance for a couple to get to know each other in a different way, and even get reacquainted with the children.

Vacations can become habits and just as addictive as coffee, cigarettes or alcohol. It sounds to me as if this would be a good time for you and your husband to kick the habit.

Plan time for extra sleeping, lounging, visiting some local sights, reading and taking in theater or even a few new restaurants. If your husband has a yen to putter, let him. If either of you has never had time to garden or try new recipes, that can be an adventure. Why not try some intellectual and emotional adventures that don't include globetrotting? You'll be saving energy in more ways than one.

DEAR DR. JOYCE BROTHERS: I have a good job, a good wife and good kids, but there's something wrong. I think I'm cracking up and I'm only 35. I keep thinking if this is the way it is now, what's it going to be like later. Everybody else my age seems to be calm, cool and right on — with relatively no anxieties. I know I'm not an alcoholic but I do feel I'm drinking more because of depression and I wonder if that's my problem. My doctor assures me nothing is wrong. — M.M.

Dear M.M.: "What's it going to be like later?" It probably will be somewhat better. At least, in the sense that your anxieties may settle down to a reasonable worry now and then, rather than the overall general state of tension you feel now.

Those friends of yours who seem relatively calm may not be quite as cool as you think. Studies indicate that the 30s is a particularly trying time of life for most Americans. Kenn Rogers, professor of Business Administration at Cleveland State University, feels that that age period surpasses infancy, childhood, adolescence and old age as a time when severe life crises are likely.

This is when many people start to look over their life and ask is that all there is? It is a time when marriages are apt to break up, when both men and women are apt to switch jobs, and when accidents are likely to occur. In short, this is a period when there is a need for special understanding and tolerance of one's own shortcomings.

Try to avoid running away from or denying your anxiety by way of alcohol. Instead, give up your infantile standards of perfection and look on the positive side.

Carryalls with couth

The ubiquitous attache aids groups

By ELLIE GROSSMAN

NEW YORK (NEA) — It's coming, the time to get down to business again, even if you worked all summer.

Come that first fall chill, you've got to be ready to strike out towards your goals, shake the world, or at least get through another day.

And what do you have to be to do that? Organized, that's what. So handbag manufacturers have exhausted themselves to create the perfect attache for fall, one you won't be able to say no to, even if you don't "work." (You "work" anyway, we know that, but you know what we mean.)

Ach! the variety of zippered compartments, pouch pockets, flaps and slots and those whatdoyoucallthem's for pencils. They're all over the place:

Inside school bags fastened by snaps with back-ups an inch behind so you can stuff in even more important papers and charge plates.

Inside and out on portfolios, envelopes, mailbags — even plain carry-alls.

Speaking of envelopes, wait 'til you see the polyurethane number by Charisma, $38, the one that opens like a book. First, you undo the overflap, then you get a hold of the right side of the body of the bag, and pull it towards you until it unsnaps. Talk about pockets and slots — you could spend all day trying to fill them. (But don't indulge in too many bulges — you want to be able to resnap it.)

How, you may wonder, are you going to carry the bag once you've filled it? Any way you want, in most cases. Shoulder straps often detach, if you want to use the handles, which often collapse themselves so you can tuck it all under your arm.

Now on a canvas mailbag by paVanne, $17, you've got an adjustable shoulder strap with a comfort pad, that's so adjustable you can lower the bag to your hip and climb into it, if you get the picture.

When it comes to trims, there's everything from hardware accents to cobra, and they're stuck on real leather or canvas bodies, or leather and suede, or something called "buffelo," which looks like buffalo hide but really isn't. Actually, it's the omnipresent, money-eating polyurethane animal that's thriving so these days.

Everything comes in the usual autumn shades, so go out there, pick an attache, pack it up and knock 'em dead. If you're not too tired by then, that is.

Not for everyone

Maillots tend to draw attention to the bosom, so those less endowed there might do well with two-piece swimsuits.

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY — To make a decorative outside planter, paint an old car tire a bright color and plant the flowers inside it. — SANDRA.

© 1977 by NEA, Inc.

DEAR POLLY — To get rid of the odor of fish that has been boiled or prepared in a pan or kettle, wash the container out with vinegar. — MABEL.

DEAR POLLY — Empty waste baskets into a large grocery bag that you carry around as you clean. It is much easier to burn or compress a bag than a lot of odd papers and so on. — HELEN.

Send your helpful hints to Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY — The three original red flowers on my poinsettia plant still look lovely but many of the leaves had fallen off, so I went to the variety store and bought greens as much like the plant's original leaves as I could find, and stuck them in the soil. They really look nice. — D.L.

DEAR POLLY — Try rinsing nylon hose out in cold water after each wearing and you'll find they last much longer. (Polly's note — I have done this for years and as regularly as I wash my teeth at night.) — BESSIE.

DEAR POLLY — When applying an iron-on patch to a hole in a pocket, the patch can stick to the garment itself in the place where the hole is. To prevent this, insert a piece of aluminum foil in the pocket, apply iron to patch according to directions and, when cool, remove the foil. — MRS. C.B.

DEAR POLLY — When going to a birthday party and my mother does not have any appropriate gift wrapping paper, she wraps the present I am taking in the funny paper. — SHAWN.

DEAR POLLY — To remove that dull look from glasses and china, I occasionally load the machine with those items only — NEVER any metal ware. I then put a bowl with one cup of household bleach in bottom of the washer, run through the washing cycle ONLY. I then refill the bowl with one cup of vinegar and let the dishwasher go through the entire cycle. This removes the film from dishes and washes walls at one time. — MRS. S.A.

DEAR READERS — Practically this same formula is given in a booklet put out by one dishwasher company BUT they warn that this should be done ONLY OCCASIONALLY, not more than once a month. Also, the dishes that are run through should be clean, as NO DETERGENT SHOULD BE USED. — POLLY

THIS WEEK'S TOP PRIZE QUESTION:

JOHN BRASWELL OF PENNINGTON, NJ, ASKS: "WHERE DOES DEW COME FROM?"

DEW IS CAUSED BY THE COOLING OF THE AIR. ON A CLEAR NIGHT, AFTER THE SUN HAS STOPPED WARMING THE EARTH, THE GROUND COOLS OFF QUICKLY. WHEN THE NIGHT AIR TOUCHES THE COOLED BLADES OF GRASS, THE AIR BECOMES CHILLED, TOO. IT GIVES UP SOME OF ITS MOISTURE, WHICH CONDENSES, OR CHANGES INTO DEWDROPS. DEW DOESN'T FALL. IT SIMPLY COLLECTS ON GRASS AND FLOWERS OR ANYTHING THAT IS COLDER THAN THE AIR AROUND IT.

KING TUT

Many of the ancient mysteries surrounding the youthful Pharaoh who ruled in Egypt 33 centuries ago are explored in a fascinating one-hour special, "Tut: The Boy King," with Orson Welles as host, Wednesday at 8PM on NBC. This gilded harpooning figure is one of the fifty-five spectacular objects in the phenomenally successful museum exhibition currently touring the country under grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities and EXXON. "Tut: The Boy King" was produced at the National Gallery of Art in Washington, D.C., and is presented under the sponsorship of EXXON and The Hartford.

Charlie

As a comedian, Charlie Callas is a familiar face to viewers of talk shows such as The Tonight Show on which he has made over 50 appearances and in major night clubs and showrooms such as Las Vegas. He now has a new career as a "serious actor," and appears in a co-starring role on Switch, the CBS series starring Robert Wagner and Eddie Albert, Saturdays at 10PM. He plays the character of Malcolm, a small-time con man who is called upon to help Wagner and Albert in their pursuit of swindlers.

"Malcolm is the first time I've played a 'straight' character on film," explains Callas. "The character is really Charlie Callas who uses accents and impersonations in his role but it's played straight instead of 'broad' as I do in my night club act. I don't consider myself as an actor in the traditional sense—rather as a personality."

Charlie has learned to be flexible enough to know when the time's right to change his plans. His first change came when he was in school studying to be a navigator for the merchant marine. "I discovered I was more interested in music and becoming a professional drummer so I went that direction," said Callas.

CLOSE-UP

KOOKIE DOLLS

Laverne De Fazio and Shirley Feeney are their names—in real life make that Penny Marshall and Cindy Williams respectively—and they are the most delightful couple of kookie dolls ever to hit television. When Laverne & Shirley premiered in January of 1976, it instantly achieved number one standing and the comedy series, seen Tuesdays on ABC at 8:30PM, has steadfastly ranked among the top ten television programs on the air.

Laverne and Shirley are television's first girl blue collar workers. They went directly from high school to jobs on the bottle-capping line in a Milwaukee brewery. They're very different in philosophies (meaning they fight a lot) but even with the conflict, they're warm, close friends who share an apartment and their zany, heart-warming adventures.

Shirley is a dreamer, a Cinderella who believes Mr. Right Guy will come along and sweep her off her feet and to a better place in life. She thinks anything is possible. On the other hand, Laverne is the realist. With her biting wisecracks, she tries to break Shirley's bubble. Laverne is street smart and spunky and she'd like to make more of herself, but she's afraid she will get hurt. However, Shirley isn't going to let her roommate get her down. Shirley has high hopes and no one is going to change her way of thinking. These two friends may disagree a lot but deep down they care and respect each other and they're going to make their dreams come true—their way.

Also appearing in the series are Phil Foster as Laverne's dad, Frank De Fazio, Eddie Mekka as Carmine Ragusa, a close friend of the girls. David L. Lander and Michael McKean, respectively Squiggy and Lenny, are their zany co-workers and neighbors. Playing their "with it" landlady is Betty Garrett and Carole Ita White is Big Rosie Greenbaum, a former high school chum who went to school with Laverne and Shirley and made it big—by marrying a doctor—and won't let them forget it.

Maria Schell guests as a Yugoslavian princess who encounters trouble from underworld figures in her search for a stolen family fortune, in Kojak, on Tuesday (10PM) on CBS.

INEXPENSIVE DISHES MADE WITH HEALTHFUL, LUSCIOUS LEMONS

Brand Loyalties Shaken By Taste Impact Of Low Tar Merit.

MERIT taste delivery switching high tar smokers away from age-old favorites.

There is a taste alternative to high tar cigarettes.

Modern technology created it.

Tests proved it.

And smokers are confirming it.

Today most MERIT smokers are coming from high tar cigarettes—many from brands they had been loyal to for years.

Yet they're switching to—and sticking with—MERIT.

The reason is a real advance in tobacco technology that resulted in a way to boost natural tobacco flavor without the usual corresponding increase in tar.

It's called 'Enriched Flavor'™ tobacco.

MERIT and MERIT 100's were both packed with this special tobacco. And taste-tested against a number of higher tar cigarettes.

Overall, smokers reported they liked the taste of both MERIT and MERIT 100's as much as the taste of the higher tar cigarettes tested.

Cigarettes having up to 60% more tar!

Only one cigarette has 'Enriched Flavor' tobacco.

And you can taste it.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR REP. LES ASPIN (D.-Wis.)

Do you feel all proceedings on the floor of Congress should be continuously televised? —Ruby Michel, Chicago, Ill.

● Sounds O.K. to me. Maybe we ought to have late-night sessions and bill them as medicinal — a sure cure for insomnia. Besides being educational, the broadcasts would help the laundry business on Capitol Hill, as 535 suits would have to be pressed every day.

FOR JULIE NIXON EISENHOWER, author of Special People

Who are some of the people you most admire? —L.J., Aurora, Ill.

● There are many, but three come to mind right away: Golda Meir (she's warm but rocklike; at times a silent woman whose voice and views can never be ignored), Prince Charles of England (a wonderful person, not a royal robot — when you're with him, he makes you feel you're as important as he is), Mao Tse-tung (a basically honest man whose biggest disappointment was the young; he found them too soft and easygoing).

FOR ANNE JACKSON, starring in The Deep

You and your husband Eli Wallach have been a team of long duration. I'm wondering whether you have identical dispositions? —M.L., Caldwell, Idaho

● Professionally, we are attuned to each other's moods and needs. Privately — well, that's another matter. When Eli gets up he attacks crossword puzzles, then quietly contemplates the day ahead. He says when I wake up I'm like a diver shot out of a submarine. Eli is at his best in the afternoon — when I like to relax. At night, when I'm raring to go, Eli turns into a pumpkin.

FOR ROY CLARK, country singer

You're so slick and poised. Did you start off that way? —M.S., Decatur, Ala.

● Thanks for the compliment. Guess I must have come a long way since I first stepped on the stage. I was so gauche and uninformed that I had no idea what an instrumental piece was. I can remember introducing a number as a new instrumental song and then proceeding to sing right along with it.

FOR JACK BARRY, TV game-show host

Why are game shows currently so popular? —S.G., Swansboro, N.C.

● In all of us there's an instinct to play games. It starts when we're kids playing hide-and-seek, then continues with juvenile and adult sports. Also, Americans love to gamble, especially vicariously by watching game shows.

FOR JANET GUTHRIE, first woman to race in the Indianapolis 500

Do you feel you're doing a man's job and depriving a male driver of work? —A.G., Wilmington, Del.

● No. There are enough openings for both sexes, and auto racing is one of the few sports in which women can compete equally with men. A woman can't run as fast as a man because her legs and hips aren't the same as his. She can never throw a ball as far as a man; her shoulders are built differently. But in racing, there's no physical or psychological reason why women can't race as fast as men.

FOR LAINIE KAZAN, singer

What effect does your phlebitis have on your work? —R.J., Hartford, Conn.

● I can't stand for long, especially on a hard floor, so I try to have a rug under me. If that's not possible, I have a stool on stage so that when my legs hurt, I can sit down. I can dance and move; it's inactivity that bothers me, not action. I also have a daily massage, which helps keep me in shape.

FOR YUL BRYNNER, star of Broadway's The King and I

What was your most unforgettable, ego-shattering experience? —D.B., Torrance, Calif.

● I first played The King and I in 1950, when I was 30. A few years ago, when it was revived in London, I felt I'd be perfect for the part because not only had I been in the original, I'd also learned an awful lot about acting in the interim. Can you imagine how I felt when I was scooped — by a young rock singer with long hair?

FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

As a long-time Dizzy Gillespie fan, I was upset to hear he visited Fidel Castro in Havana. What was his reason? —O.L., Medford, Ore.

● Dizzy was one of 380 Americans aboard the Daphne, the first cruise ship to head for Havana since 1961. He played in a special jazz tribute in memory of the famous Cuban jazz drummer, Chano Pozo, at Havana's National Theater, and that's where he no doubt met Castro. He was accompanied on the trip and at the concert by other famed musicians — Stan Getz, Earl (Fatha) Hines and David Amram.

FOR VIKKI CARR

How were you discovered? —Brad Wyche, Greenville, S.C.

● During high school I was offered a weekend job with Pepe Callahan's Mexican-Irish band. (I never studied music or singing. I just sang.) I was all set to turn it down because I was engaged to be married at the time, but my fiancé wisely told me not to. He didn't want me to say ten years later, "If it hadn't been for you...." After that, I was "discovered" lots of times. And I hope it never stops.

PRO AND CON

If We Revive The Draft, Should Women Be Subject To Call?

PRO Eve Norman, national treasurer, National Organization of Women (NOW)

Yes. There is nothing in the Constitution which prohibits women from being drafted now, if there were a draft. At the very end of World War II there were orders to begin drafting women, which were never implemented because the war ended. During a seminar I attended for the armed services, it was pointed out to me that a large number of women are being trained right alongside of men in front-line support positions, particularly in the medical and mechanical areas. If one truly believes in defending the country, it shouldn't matter if one is male or female, simply that one is trained and qualified to do so.

CON Phyllis Schlafly, coauthor of Kissinger on the Couch and the forthcoming The Power of the Positive Woman

No. Women have a more important mission than answering the military draft call, namely, answering the call to motherhood, which is more of a responsibility than serving as a soldier. Motherhood takes longer than the two-year period of the military draft; motherhood is more important to the future of our country because we are now at zero population growth. The whole idea of drafting women into the Army is based on the untenable premise that nursing a baby and hand-to-hand combat are interchangeable roles. There is an eternal difference which women's lib propaganda about "stereotyped sex roles" can never erase.

LIZA MINNELLI: A HOT TALENT WHO KEEPS HER COOL

Like her mother, she exudes talent and performs with electrifying and soulful energy. But the personal life of this vivacious, highly disciplined and happily married star does not resemble Judy Garland's tragic despair.

Francine Evans (Liza Minnelli), a young band vocalist, and Jimmy Doyle (Robert De Niro), a jazz musician, fall in love in New York, New York, Martin Scorsese's $8 million romantic musical drama set at the end of the big-band era. De Niro would not agree to play the role until he had learned how to play the sax, so he spent weeks diligently working with veteran saxophone great, Georgie Auld.

Alan Pappé/Lee Gross

By Patricia Baum

Her spirited nightclub performances get standing ovations and leave audiences clamoring for more. Her acting, in such films as Cabaret and New York, New York, brings spontaneous bursts of applause from the movie crew. Whatever the medium, Liza Minnelli electrifies it with her forceful presence. She can move people to laughter and to tears with equal ease, sometimes simultaneously, and her dynamic talent has won Liza a string of major awards, including an Oscar, an Emmy and a Tony.

And in becoming something of a legend in her own right, her talent has at long last freed her from the shadow of her noted parents, Judy Garland and Vincente Minnelli.

Fortunately, the Garland-Minnelli mystique did not saddle Liza with the identity hangups one might expect. As Liza explains while relaxing in her hotel suite before a nightclub appearance, "My father told me that right after I was born, I looked at them both and said, 'It's nice to have you for parents. Now excuse me while I lead my own life.' And I did. I always knew where the myth ended and I began."

Her words ring true because Liza comes across as both a level-headed and exuberant young woman (now 31) who can cope with anything. During her bizarre and at times painful childhood, Liza was shuttled among more than 20 schools, had several stepfathers and mothered her own mother during Judy Garland's bouts with booze, pills and suicidal despair.

Although keenly aware of the perils of stardom, Liza could not escape a show-biz career. When you're the daughter of Judy Garland and Vincente Minnelli, that's the only mode of existence you know. The very language of the house was, "What time is rehearsal?" "When is the next recording session?" "The script must be ready by tomorrow." Liza played dress-up in miniature versions of costumes from famous films and at Judy's lavish parties stayed up to mingle with the likes of Frank Sinatra, Marilyn Monroe and Humphrey Bogart. She also visited the movie sets where her mother was filming or her father directing, even riding the boom with him on camera cranes and getting a view of filmmaking few actresses have. Fascinated with dancing, she would steal off to the rehearsal halls, goggle at Fred Astaire and Cyd Charisse, then practice at home for hours in front of a mirror.

A born entertainer, Liza had some early cracks at performing. At 3 she did a walk-on role in Judy's musical In the Good Old Summertime. A few years later she joined her mother on stage in New York and "danced my little heart out" while Judy sang "Swanee." But it was not until her teens, when she saw the Broadway musical Bye Bye Birdie, that the urge became irrepressible. "That show was full of kids," she explains, "and seemed like an answer to the kind of loneliness I felt. Just friends fooling around with lots of laughter."

Shortly afterwards, at 16, she quit school. Refusing to take money from her parents, she was thrown out of a hotel and had her clothes confiscated when she couldn't pay the bill. She was soon able to meet expenses by landing a part in an off-Broadway show. Then her starring role in Flora, the Red Menace put her well into the black and made her, at 19, the youngest Tony winner.

Thereon her career went up, up and away as Liza moved swiftly and easily into nightclubs and films. With her fourth film, Cabaret, she won an Oscar and superstar status.

Liza's smash success began to dispel the myths surrounding her and her parents. But at the same time she faced others because the glamorous and sexy character she portrayed was such a startling departure from her earlier roles. Before Cabaret Liza had been in her awkward "ugly duckling" phase. Overweight with stringy hair, she went about in knee socks and baggy sweaters. Her film roles, such as the love-hungry Pookie in The Sterile Cuckoo, had reflected this gawky waiflike image. But in Cabaret, Liza wowed the public with her new and provocative grown-up look. And suddenly everyone saw her as the pleasure-seeking Sally Bowles.

In fact, she was so dedicated that she had been working with a near-maniacal intensity. Albert Finney, director of her first film, Charlie Bubbles, advised her, "Do half of what you're doing." Alan Pakula (The Sterile Cuckoo) suggested, "Put a lid on it." And during the shooting of New York, New York, Martin Scorsese was constantly toning her down with, "Easy, easy." "Yeah," Liza concurs with a grin, "I could have burned up all those sets with my energy."

Fortunately, her high-voltage sparks only in her performances. Liza is not temperamental. Says her father, who directed her recently in the film A Matter of Time: "Although she's loaded with energy, she has endless patience and discipline. She can sit for hours while the set is being lit."

Liza believes that "if one is given talent, it's wrong to misuse it and be self-destructive," so she pops no pills. And, having been haunted through much of her childhood by her mother's financial insecurity, she has "a thing now about being solvent" and keeps track of her hefty earnings down to the last dime. She's lavish with those she loves — she paid for half-sister Lorna Luft's acting lessons, her half-brother Joey's car and a friend's lengthy hospital stay — but lives modestly by superstar standards. "I cut my own hair," she says, pointing to her short bob, "so that I don't need a hairdresser with me." And she and husband Jack Haley Jr. are still cramped into his former bachelor home.

Liza is in her second marriage (her mother had five unsuccessful ones), but she says, "This is it for me." Her first, to singer and songwriter Peter Allen, failed because "his career was marking time while mine was taking off. It was like going through A Star is Born. The competition was killing us. I vowed never to marry another performer." Jack (son of the actor who played the Tin Woodsman in The Wizard of Oz) is a producer and 12 years her senior.

After nearly three years, Liza says, they're closer than ever. "We've settled in and become more comfortable. We've discovered what bugs each other so we don't irritate each other. And we've found ways to spend more time together than people imagine we do." Jack often works out of their home, breaking now and then for pizza and TV with Liza. When Liza travels for nightclub or film work, he tries to join her at least part of the time and brings his videotape editing machine.

With Jack, Liza has found the stability and home life she sorely missed as a child. Gone are what she calls her "willies" — anxiety attacks when her hands would turn cold and she feared her heart would stop. Banished, too, is the "deep-down loneliness" she always felt even when she was surrounded by people. And, when her commitments permit, she plans to become a mother.

Liza derives happiness from her marriage and career as well as from her own generous gift for life. "I can find humor in situations that other people don't consider funny," she chuckles, "like checking into a hotel and discovering there is no heat or hot water. I always manage to have a good time. I'm just so inspired by being alive!" Endearingly vivacious and yet keenly sensible, Liza Minnelli clearly is not headed for the tragic end of Judy Garland but toward her own bright rainbow.

CUT ALONG DOTTED LINE

IS THERE LIFE AFTER DEATH?

Dr. Raymond Moody interviewed hundreds of people who died and then were revived. What he learned about their experiences has had a profound effect on him.

By L. B. Taylor

A few years ago, Dr. Raymond Moody began developing a rather curious interest — he interviewed everyone he could find who had died. It all began when, as an undergraduate at the University of Virginia in 1965, he met a psychiatrist from the medical school who gave an amazing account of his experience during the period in which he was dead. Some years later, one of Dr. Moody's students at the university where he was a professor of philosophy told him of a relative who had died and then had described her experience — it was nearly identical to the psychiatrist's.

His curiosity aroused, Dr. Moody then began interviewing people who had been clinically dead — those whose hearts and breathing had stopped but were revived through medical treatment — and discovered that they all had basically the same experiences:

- They hear a loud, uncomfortable ringing or buzzing noise.
- They have the feeling of passing through a long, dark tunnel or valley, after which many subjects find themselves "outside" of their own physical bodies. If they are in the hospital, they often "float" up to the ceiling, where they watch the doctors and nurses trying to revive their bodies.
- Their life flashes before their eyes.
- They see friends and relatives, who have died years before, welcoming them.
- They encounter a brilliant, intense white light, often with some shadowy form of a Christ figure.

Using his interviews as a base, Dr. Moody wrote what became a surprise best seller, Life After Life, in which he chronicled the experiences of these people. That book sold more than 2,000,000 copies, and a new book, Reflections on Life After Life, has now been published.

What have the several years of research, all those interviews with the hundreds of people who have experienced this phenomenon, dozens of appearances on television talk shows, scores of lectures, a great amount of publicity and royalty checks meant to the 32-year-old, soft-spoken Dr. Moody, a serious-minded scholar? How has it all affected him?

"It has been a most enriching experience, and I don't mean that in any material sense," he says, in his modest home in the suburbs of Charlottesville, Va.

"I'm not trying to sell a point of view, although I admit I've had my own emotional response to all this," he says. Dr. Moody, who is an M.D. and a Ph.D. in philosophy and soon hopes to return to residency work in psychiatry, adds, "When people ask me for my opinion, I have to say, 'Look, this is Raymond Moody subjectively speaking.' But after talking to hundreds of people who have had this experience, I personally do not doubt that there is survival of bodily death.

"I'm not drawing that conclusion as a scientist. In fact, I don't think that there will be a definite proof of life after death in the strict sense. I believe this is more a matter of faith. After all my research and interviews, I'm personally a believer."

In Dr. Moody's view, one of the best things his first book accomplished was to bring a long-repressed and highly sensitive subject into the open. "This has been very gratifying to me," he says. "I've gotten hundreds of letters from people who have said they have carried their experience around inside themselves for years without telling even their closest friends or relatives. But now, they can talk about it for the first time."

Before the book, Dr. Moody explains, a person revived from the jaws of death might try to relate his experience to a doctor, who would brush it off and say it was something he should tell his minister. The minister would say he should see a psychiatrist, who might tell the person he was hallucinating. Friends and relatives would be embarrassed about the whole matter.

"So, for fear of being thought crazy, these people became frustrated and repressed their experiences. They thought they were the only ones who had them," Dr. Moody says. Publication of Life After Life thus has been a revelation to thousands of people in this country and abroad who have had such an experience.

The book also has dramatically altered Dr. Moody's own way of living. "It has really been hectic around here," says Louise Moody, his effervescent and attractive wife and the mother of their two sons, Avery, 6, and Palmer, 3.

Aside from the volume of mail, visitors drop in at their house at all hours. "Our home has become a kind of hotel for people who were nearly dead," Dr. Moody says, smiling.

Actually, Dr. Moody was totally unprepared for the runaway popularity of his book and the attendant hoopla that followed. In fact, the book was written almost by accident. An obscure publisher, John Egle of Mockingbird Books in Dr. Moody's home town of Covington, Ga., read about a talk Dr. Moody gave and called him about doing a book.

"I like to write, and I had all my files and research tapes, so it was no problem to do it," Dr. Moody points out.

But he is an unlikely best-selling author. For one thing, he dislikes publicity. When the book took off, he appeared on the Today program, the Merv Griffin Show and numerous others but found such showmanship distasteful. He even asked Griffin not to display a copy of his book on the show, much to the chagrin of his publishers. In recent months he has turned down scores of requests for interviews, lectures and personal appearances.

L. B. Taylor Jr.

Dr. Moody, an M.D. and Ph.D. in philosophy, with his wife, Louise, and their two sons, Avery, 6, and Palmer, 3. Since publication of Life After Life, their home has become a center for people who were clinically dead and want to talk about what they encountered.

"Basically, I'm an introvert and homebody," he says. "And I don't like being away from my family so much." Despite the commercial success of the books, money apparently means less to Dr. Moody than to others. He says it has made his research easier, but the only physical evidence of his improved financial position is the completion of a book-lined study in the basement of his house.

A friend, who helps him handle correspondence and assists in the management of his affairs, says he nearly went crazy trying to find an $18,000 royalty check that had gotten lost. "It finally turned out that Raymond was using it as a bookmark," the friend says, shaking his head.

One beneficial aspect of the instant fame, Dr. Moody says, is that he and Louise have made wonderful friends all over the world. He also has brought together people into group sessions who can share and compare what they encountered during the few minutes between being declared dead and being revived.

Dr. Moody also has enjoyed the humor associated with some of his case histories. "I've been moved to tears of joy by people relating their experiences to me," he says, "and sometimes to laughter."

One woman, for example, declared dead after complications from gall-bladder surgery, drifted out of her body during her experience and saw her relatives, who had been hastily called to the hospital and were huddled together in a nearby waiting room. All the woman could think of was that her daughter had on an outfit with mismatched colors, and she kept trying to make her go home and change clothes.

In another instance, a young man was struck in the neck by lightning and declared dead three different times. He later told Dr. Moody about his experience between revivals and said, "I'd been praying to God for 10 years to send me a sign that there was life after death. Now I'm praying, please don't send me another sign."

"To me, this shows something very much worth knowing about the human spirit," Dr. Moody says. "It's impressed me that people, even at the moment of death, don't lose their sense of humor."

A negative aspect of the fame, however, is that Dr. Moody is afraid of being labeled, as one of his friends put it, "the cult guru of the dead set." "I want to get out of this very soon," Dr. Moody says. "After years of research and two books, I think I've said all I can say on the subject. I would like to see others now examine the phenomenon from other perspectives, say from a philosophical, cultural or anthropological point of view.

"I don't pretend to be an expert," he continued. "There have been something like 60 billion people on earth through history, according to some estimates. It strikes me as highly unlikely that Raymond Moody could have solved this great mystery all by himself.

"I'm committed to speaking engagements through February 1978. After that, I hope to get back to my psychiatry residency at the University of Virginia. I have about two and a half years to complete it. Then I may want to practice medicine, to help people. I'm ready to retire to anonymity."

L. B. Taylor is a free-lancer who has contributed to numerous national publications, including Reader's Digest, The National Observer, Today's Health and The Saturday Evening Post.

LEMON UP SUMMER MEALS

There's a golden wealth of taste at your fingertips when you look to lemons for hot-weather eating.

By Marilyn Hansen

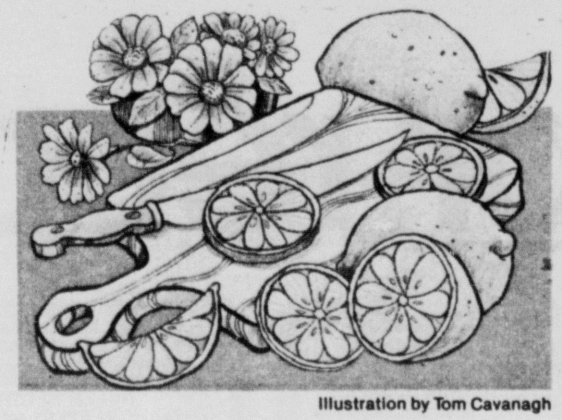

Illustration by Tom Cavanagh

LEMONY TUNA CASSEROLE

1 lb. thin (#9 or #10) spaghetti or vermicelli
Salt
Boiling water
¼ lb. butter or margarine, melted
Juice of 2 lemons (6 tablespoons)
2 tablespoons finely chopped onion
1 pt. sour cream
1 teaspoon salt
Few twists freshly ground black pepper
2 tablespoons chopped fresh dill weed or 1 tablespoon dry dill weed
2 cans (6½ or 7 ozs.) tuna, drained and flaked
2 tablespoons corn flake crumbs

1. Cook spaghetti in 4 qts. salted boiling water until just tender (to your taste). Drain in colander.

2. Set aside 2 tablespoons melted butter. Combine remaining butter, lemon juice, onion, sour cream, salt, pepper and dill.

3. In large, shallow, greased casserole, spread ⅔ of the spaghetti. Cover with flaked tuna, half of sauce and remaining spaghetti.

4. Top with remaining sauce. Sprinkle with corn flake crumbs and drizzle with remaining 2 tablespoons melted butter.

5. Bake for 20 to 30 minutes in a preheated 350° F. oven until heated throughout and bubbly. May be frozen. Makes 6 servings

FRESH LEMONADE SYRUP BASE

1½ cups sugar
½ cup boiling water
1 tablespoon freshly grated lemon peel
1½ cups freshly squeezed lemon juice

1. Dissolve sugar in boiling water. Add lemon peel and juice. Store in covered container in refrigerator. Makes 2⅔ cups base

Lemonade by the glass: In large glass, combine ¼ to ⅓ cup lemonade syrup base with ¾ cup cold water and ice cubes; stir well.

EASY FRESH LEMON ICE CREAM

2 cups heavy cream or half-and-half
1 cup sugar
1 tablespoon freshly grated lemon peel
⅓ cup freshly squeezed lemon juice
7 to 10 lemon shells or boats,* optional

1. In large bowl, combine cream and sugar; stir until sugar dissolves.

2. Blend in lemon peel and juice. Pour into shallow pan. (An 8- x 8-inch square pan is fine.)

3. Freeze until firm, about 4 hours. Serve in dessert glasses, lemon shells or boats.

Makes about 3 cups

*To Make Lemon Shell: Cut ⅓ off end of large lemon. Carefully ream out pulp; reserve. Scrape shell clean with spoon.

*To Make Lemon Boat: Cut large lemon in half lengthwise and, with shallow V-shape cut, remove white center core. Carefully ream out pulp; reserve. Scrape shell "clean" with spoon.

Good News: Citrus shells may be made ahead and frozen until ready to use. Save reamed-out pulp for making lemonade or for tossing a little with freshly cooked vegetables or salads.

Makers of Tylenol, Shame on you!

Anyone who sees Tylenol advertising similar to this could get the idea that doctors recommend Tylenol products more than Aspirin.

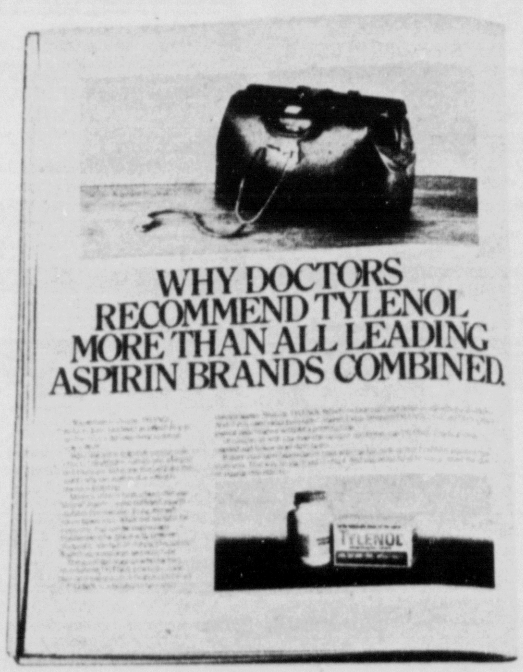

That's simply not true.

Look carefully at the words in the Tylenol headline "... more than all leading Aspirin brands combined." Now just think of all the times doctors say "Take Aspirin" without mentioning a specific brand by name!

It seems the makers of Tylenol don't want you to know about all those Aspirin recommendations. So they don't count them as doctors' recommendations.

The people who make Tylenol know the truth as well as we do. And the truth is this... Doctors recommend Aspirin more than twice as often as they do Tylenol!

Tylenol ads could fool people!

Problems with Tylenol they don't talk about.

The same ad claims Tylenol is "safer than Aspirin...when used as directed" and features a picture of the package that claims Tylenol is "safe." However, what they don't mention is that Tylenol products have their own side effects.

Leading medical experts have expressed great concern about the occurrence of liver damage with acetaminophen (the chemical name for the ingredient in all Tylenol products). These experts are currently recommending that all acetaminophen products' labels carry the warning, "Do not exceed recommended dosage because severe liver damage may occur."

In fact, when acetaminophen is misused, or taken in overdose, it is much more toxic than aspirin.

Aspirin's superb 78-year record.

Aspirin is the most studied and tested drug in the history of medicine. The medical profession has had over 78 years of experience with Aspirin. In America, people suffering from pain and fever take over 100 million Aspirin tablets a day—with very low incidence of side effects. In fact, a specialist from a world-famous clinic has stated that "Aspirin is undoubtedly the safest pharmaceutical known to modern medicine." No wonder that in the conclusions of the AMA Drug Evaluations, Aspirin continues to be "the drug of choice." Not Tylenol. Aspirin!

Tylenol has less to offer than Aspirin.

Tylenol advertising says it is "just as effective" as Aspirin. But what it doesn't tell you is that inflammation can be a major cause of most pain, and that Tylenol does nothing about inflammation. Absolutely nothing.

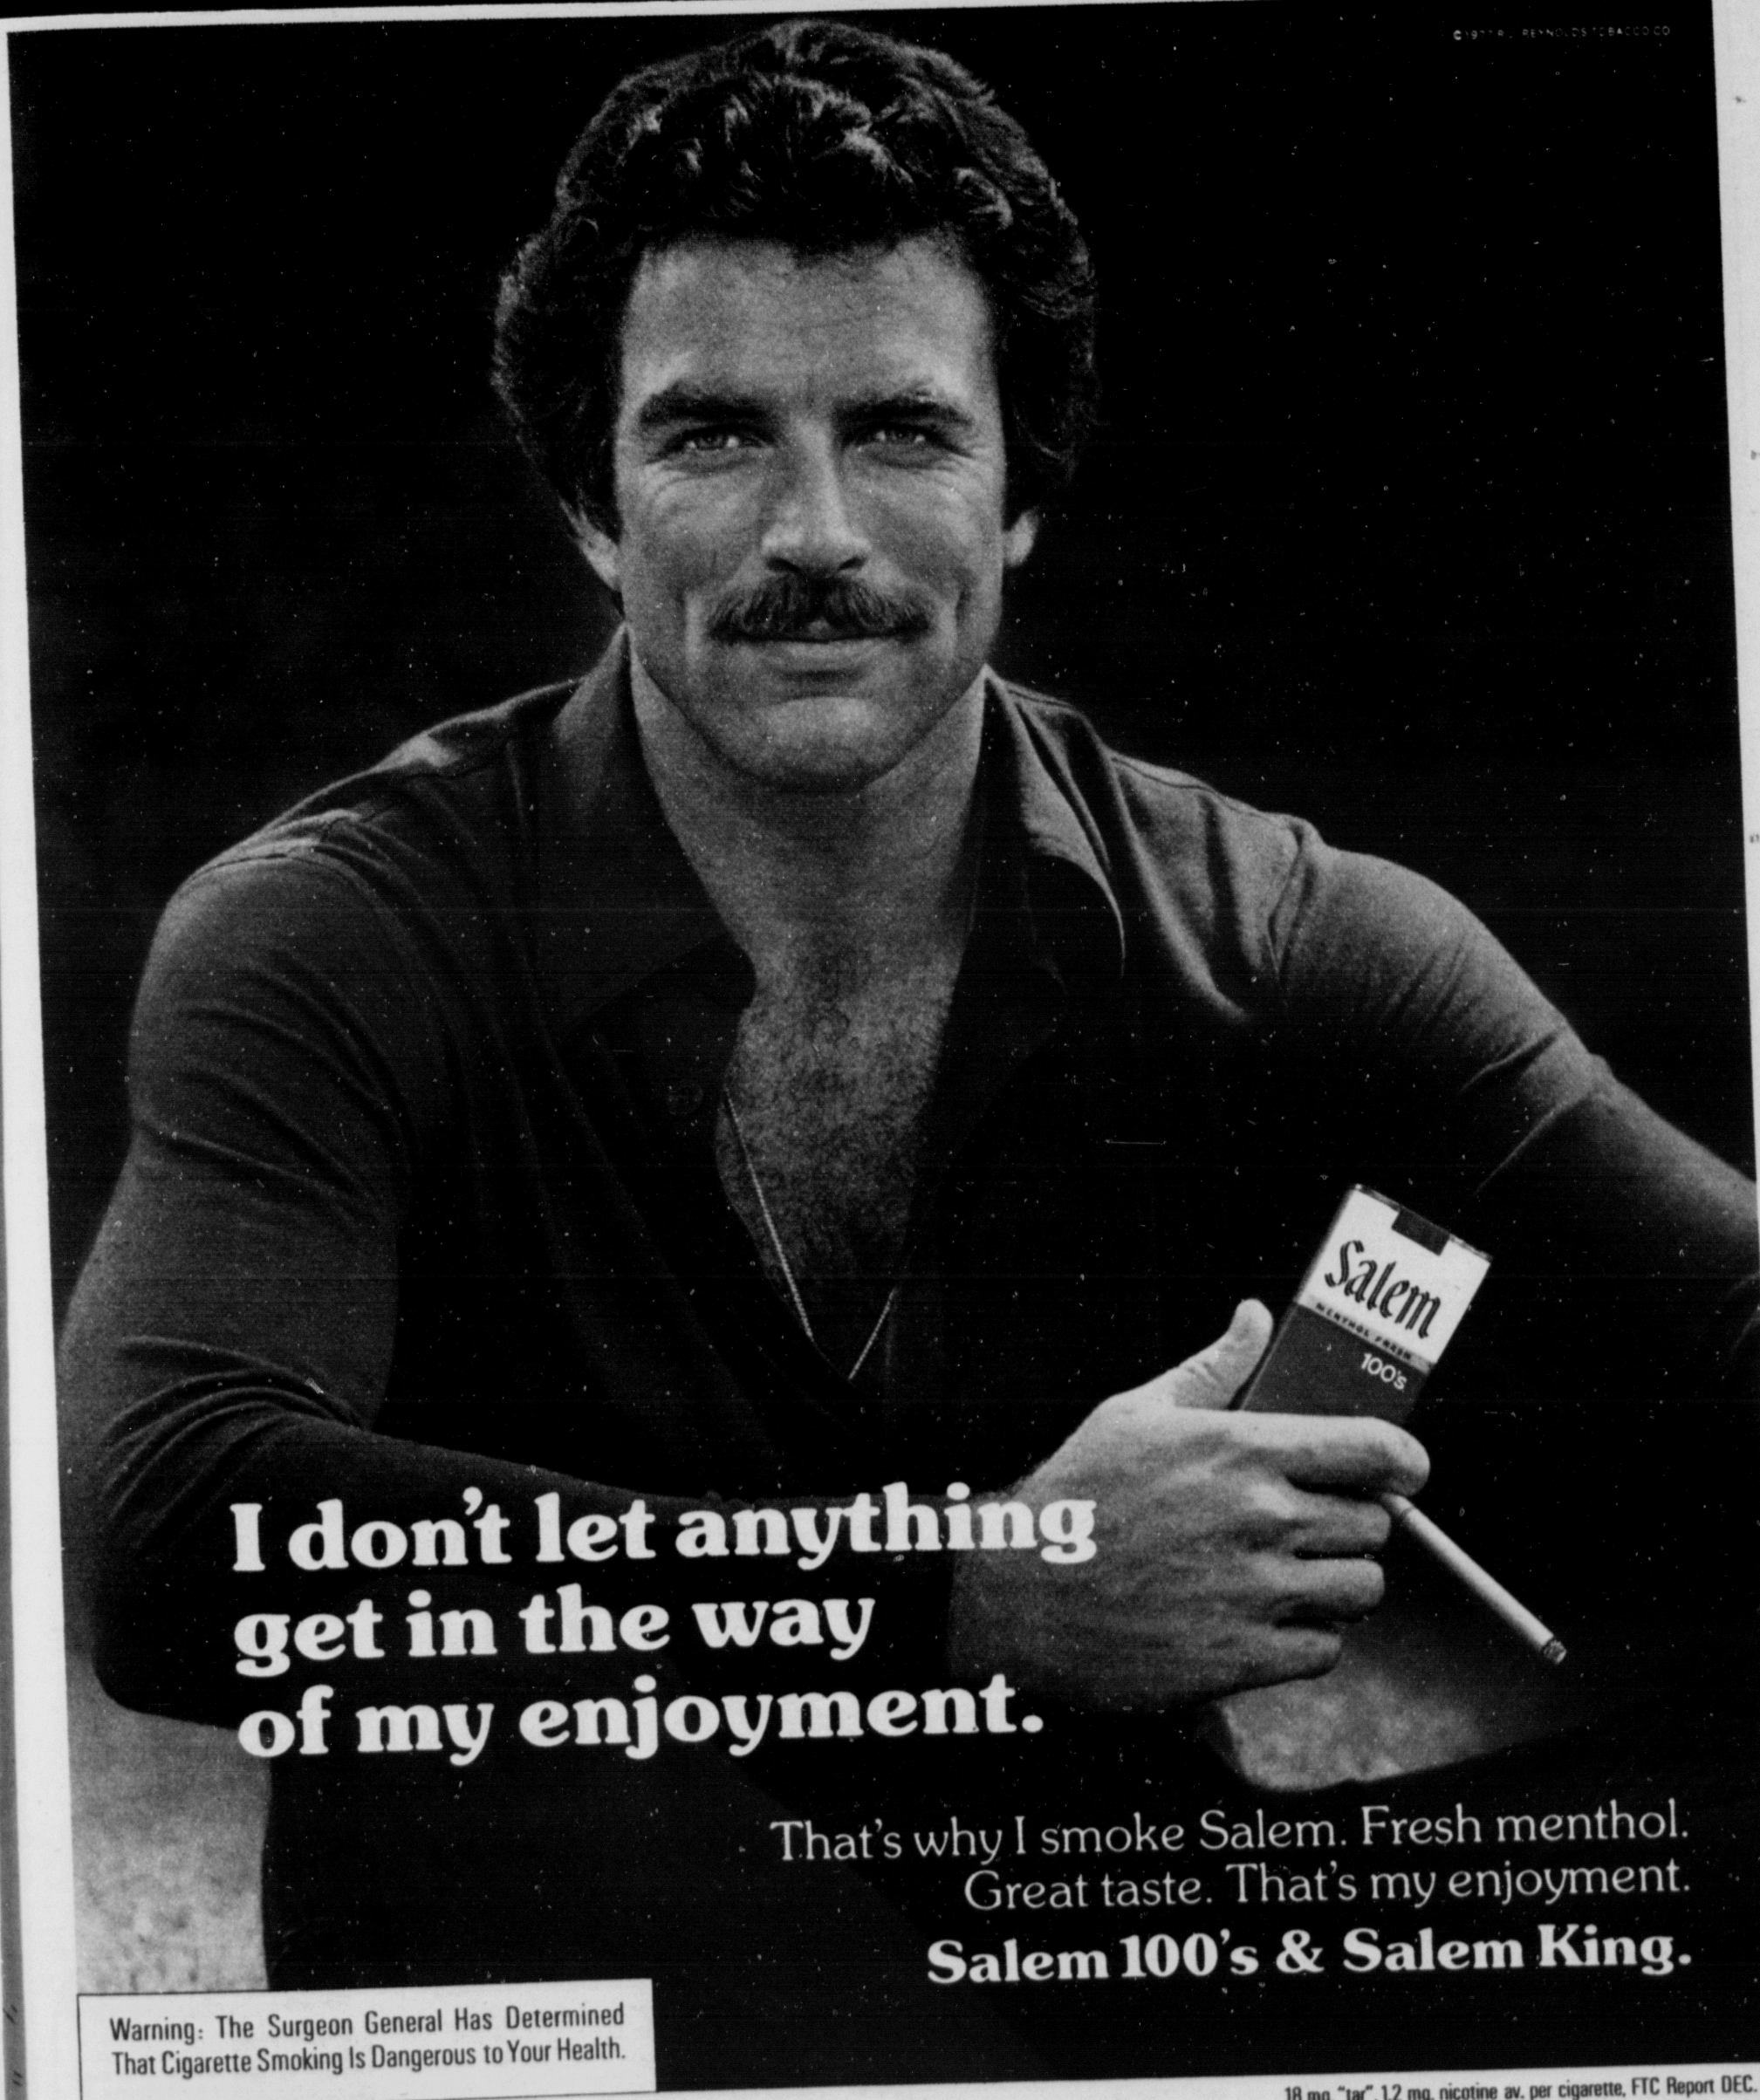

Aspirin, on the other hand, relieves inflammation. When people need pain relief, that's a difference to remember.

Now, makers of Tylenol, let's look at your advertising again. "Safer than Aspirin"? "Just as effective"? Shame on you!

Truth: Doctors recommend Aspirin 2 to 1.

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

AT A LOSS

My wife has lost an earring,
My wife has lost a glove.
What I am always fearing
Is what comes next, my dove.

My wife has lost her glasses,
My wife has lost her purse.
With every day that passes
I ask, "What's left? What's worse?"

She hasn't lost her senses,
And on my bended knee
My gratitude immense is
She hasn't yet lost me.

—Richard Armour

Bus Journey

We early and plucky ones
Grab every seat;
The later and lucky ones
Stand on our feet. —Rex Mobley

WHAT IN THE WORLD...

Watched Ovens Waste Watts

We've all heard the one about too many cooks, but how about too many looks by the cook? After studying the cooking habits of 58 housewives for 6 months, Dr. John Fechter Jr., a psychologist with the National Bureau of Standards, says that one of the biggest kitchen energy wasters is the habit many cooks have of constantly opening the oven. Dr. Fechter suggests that manufacturers install door buzzers on electric ranges to help people kick the habit. He estimates that more efficient cooking easily could save the country millions of kilowatt hours of electricity and consumers several million dollars each year.

Freeze Those Extra Fruits and Vegetables

If your home-grown produce is getting to be too much of a good thing, why not freeze some to enjoy later in the year? Most fruits and vegetables can be frozen so that they will keep their natural color, flavor and nutritional value for 8 to 12 months. For the most successful results, Carole Davis, a food technologist with the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, recommends:

- Pick fruits and vegetables that freeze well. Berries, cherries, peaches, pears, green beans and corn are good bets; foods with a high water content, such as lettuce or tomatoes (except as juice or cooked) are not.
- Freeze food as soon as possible after picking.
- Use moisture-vapor resistant containers. Containers made of glass, metal and rigid plastic will prevent evaporation and keep food well frozen. Cottage cheese, milk and ice-cream containers are not suitable.
- Don't freeze too much food at once. Overloading your freezer slows down the rate of freezing and food may lose quality or spoil. You can safely freeze 2 or 3 pounds of food for every cubic foot of your freezer's capacity.
- If you'd like more suggestions on home freezing, write for a copy of the Dept. of Agriculture's pamphlet, Home Freezing of Fruits and Vegetables. Send 75¢ to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 123E-Z, Pueblo, Colo. 81009.

Why Weren't You Hired?

Having had too many jobs in the past is the No. 1 reason applicants are turned down by potential employers. That's the chief finding of a new survey taken by National Personnel Associates, a recruiting network of independent management-level personnel services with 172 offices in 131 cities. "Diversified experience is an asset," says Charles Marks, N.P.A.'s executive director. "And a too-long stay at a job without progress is a liability. Yet a rapid change without career advancement makes employers wary. The cost of hiring an applicant who might soon leave is too high." The second most common reason for a turn-down by an employer was apparent reluctance of the employee or spouse to relocate. Having the "wrong" personality for the employer was the third most frequent reason for rejection. The respondents commented that often highly subjective factors come into play here. "Some employers like applicants most like themselves — in height, weight, cultural background and personality," says one Cleveland associate. Other reasons for rejection, in order, were: 4) Unrealistic salary requirements, 5) Employee judged not to have the needed background, 6) Poor employment record, 7) Employee unresponsive, uninterested or unprepared during the interview.

Pickled Piggies

Pigs regularly get drunk at the Univ. of Missouri in experiments scientists hope will reveal more about human alcoholism. Some of the tippling pigs have developed the equivalent of a quart-a-day habit, and they prefer screwdrivers, an alcohol and orange-juice mix. A summary of one 7-pig project, released by the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, said that "drunk or sober, pigs are a lot like people in ways that are social as well as physical." For instance, heavy drinking cost the pigs' leader his status in the social order in just 24 hours, and the way was left open for pig No. 3, a light drinker, to move into the top job. But the deposed king "went on the wagon," and 72 hours later was back in charge.

Sidestepping Summer Foot Problems

If summer weather tempts you to kick off your shoes, watch your step. According to Dr. Alvin Kanegis, president of the Podiatry Society of the State of New York, going barefoot is the largest factor contributing to summer foot injuries. In addition to cuts and bruises, walking barefoot can lead to plantar wart, a painful infection that develops when a virus penetrates the sole of the foot through cuts in the skin. Dr. Kanegis advises buying shoes near the end of the day; if the shoe is comfortable then, when the foot is most swollen, it won't pinch. If you're wearing sneakers, be sure to wear socks. And whatever kind of shoes you wear, try to avoid perspiration problems which can become serious if the skin between the toes cracks allowing athlete's-foot fungus to enter. To minimize perspiration problems, keep the feet clean and dry, change shoes and socks frequently and use a good foot powder.

Using Your Air Conditioner To Save Money

If you have an air conditioner, using it more efficiently, plus a few inexpensive home improvements, could substantially cut your electric bill. Efficient air-conditioning use is largely common sense, says Dr. Melvin Meyerson, chief of the products systems analysis division of the National Bureau of Standards, but we all forget. Remember to set the thermostat as high as possible — with central air-conditioning, you'll have energy savings of 18% or more for every 2° you raise the thermostat above 72°. If your room air conditioner has a fan that will operate when the condenser is off, try using the fan alone. Considering buying an air conditioner? Check the energy efficiency ratio (EER) of any window unit before you buy. The higher the EER, the cheaper it will be to operate. You can figure out a machine's EER yourself by dividing the unit's cooling capacity (BTU's per hour) by the wattage of the machine. For more energy-saving tips, send 70¢ to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 065E-Z, Pueblo, Colo. 81009 and ask for a copy of Making the Most of Your Energy Dollars.

Look Ahead When Buying Contacts

If you wear glasses and are thinking of switching to contact lenses, doing a little homework first can save you money. According to Dr. Robert Koetting, a St. Louis optometrist and contact-lens chairman of the American Optometric Association, many people waste money and risk harming their eyes because they don't know how to shop for contact lenses. If you're considering contacts, make sure you see a contact-lens specialist. "A lot of people think they can just have contacts made up from an eyeglass prescription," Dr. Koetting said. "They don't realize that it takes special fittings to prescribe the right lenses for a patient." Improperly fitting hard lenses may distort the front surface of the eye, resulting in blurred vision that can last a few weeks or, in some cases, become permanent. Dr. Koetting advises prospective lens wearers to get an estimate of what the lens examination will cost because figures may differ by as much as $150 in the same city. An initial hard-lens examination and fitting usually run from $150 to $300 (for soft contacts, about $100 more). Find out what the fee covers — and for how long. Dr. Koetting points out the fee should generally include an initial visit and examination, the lenses, a second office visit when you get your lenses to explain care and handling, a specified number of follow-up visits to insure proper fit, and insurance against loss.

How Effective Are Detectives?

The TV image of the supersleuth police detective may be a con job, according to a 2½-year study conducted by the Rand Corporation of Santa Monica, Calif. Dr. Peter Greenwood, who supervised the study of 153 police departments, says that, in general, patrolmen are more responsible for the solving of cases than are detectives. Part of the reason may be that, unlike their television counterparts who are pictured devoting weeks to a case, police detectives give 40% of their cases less than a half-hour's attention.
